

The Day We Celebrate

LAKE CHAMPLAIN TER-CENTENARY

Great Time at Port Henry in Honor of the Great French Explorer.

GREAT SPECTACLE HAS BEEN ARRANGED

Notable Men in Attendance at Joint Commemoration
by States.

Port Henry, July 5.—With the crumbling ruins of Forts Amherst and Frederick forming a historic setting, the first of a series of events celebrating the 300th anniversary of the discovery of Lake Champlain by the famous explorer, navigator and colonizer, Samuel De Champlain, took place today at Crown Point, where Champlain with his Canadian-Indian allies of the Huron and Algonquin tribes first met the Iroquois in battle.

States in Joint Effort.

The celebration was arranged jointly between the states of New York and Vermont and will continue throughout the week, representatives of France, England and Canada and of the Indians joining with those of the states and of the federal government in the exercises commemorative of the history-making struggles throughout the Champlain valley.

H. Wallace Knapp, of Moore, heads the New York commission which will entertain President Taft, United States Senator Root, Ambassador France, of Great Britain, and Ambassador Jusserand, of France, members of the legislature and other distinguished guests. Thursday and Friday the party will be

NAMES A VIGILANCE COUNCIL FOR DIOCESE

Bishop Alerding Has Chosen
Clergymen for Special Service.

Rt. Rev. Bishop Alerding has named as a vigilance council for the diocese of Fort Wayne Rt. Rev. John H. Oechtering, dean of the Fort Wayne district; Rev. John Bleckmann, dean of the South Bend district; Rev. William Berg, dean of the Hammond district; Rev. Bernard Kroeger, dean of the Logansport district; Rev. John H. Dinnen, dean of the Lafayette district, and Rev. William Schmidt, dean of the Muncie district.

By a papal bulletin issued some time ago by the holy father, what is known as the council of vigilance has been revived in every diocese in the world. The duties of this council are to watch whether and by what means new errors creep in and find circulation and to inform the bishop of them so that by united action remedies may be provided and to report to the bishop any danger to the faith or morals of the faithful.

SAFE AND SANE AT THE SEAT OF POWER

Young America in Washington Gives Statesmen a Flossy Fourth.

Washington, July 5.—With the young American as subdued and as quiet as on a Sunday, Washingtonians are today experiencing and some are enjoying their first "safe and sane" Fourth of July celebration. Not even a tiny firecracker had spoken in a back yard; only the sound of the board of trade and the chamber of commerce was to be heard.

The fact that it has not been possible to buy a penny's worth of fireworks in the city made it a comparatively easy task for the police to enforce the regulations against the individual use of explosives. Arrest threatened anyone who dared disregard the order of the district commissioners.

During the forenoon the most extensive exercises were held at the new statue of Stephenson, the founder of the Grand Army of the Republic. Patriotic music, in which the marine band figured prominently, and an address by Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma, were listened to by a large concourse.

At 3 o'clock tonight Pennsylvania avenue will be illuminated and with thousands of flags suspended from buildings will be made to look as gay as on inauguration night.

SLAIN BY CRACKER; WENT TO SEE WHY IT DIDN'T

Prominent Louisville Insurance Man Killed at Seymour, Ind.

Seymour, Ind., July 5.—Arthur G. Langham, of Louisville, Ky., former president of the Provident Life Insurance society, is dead from the effects of a cannon cracker exploding in his hands today. He was spending the week-end at the home of John J. Peter, Mr. Langham's brother-in-law. A cannon cracker thrown lighted up on the lawn failed to explode and Mr. Langham took it in his hand and re-lighted it. The cracker burst in his grasp tearing every finger of his hand from its socket and mangle the hand frightfully. He was operated upon at once but never regained consciousness.

OVERLOADED CANNON; TWO DYING.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 5.—A cannon which had been overcharged exploded last night in North Wilkesbarre and four boys were so badly injured that two of them may die. Michael McNulty's left hand was blown off, Thomas Collahan lost an eye and James Daugherty and Anthony Porokovitz were perhaps fatally burned. Exploding firecrackers set fire to the dress of 10-year-old Rosa Lituska and she was fatally burned.

BOARD ACCEPTED HIS RESIGNATION

W. H. Whittaker is Out as Superintendent of the Reformatory.

IS REPORTED AS SERIOUSLY ILL

Board Will Not Choose a Successor at Once It is Thought.

Jeffersonville, Ind., July 5.—W. H. Whittaker, general superintendent of the Indiana reformatory, whose resignation, tendered Saturday to the board of trustees, at Indianapolis, is confined to his bed and his condition is said by his physicians to be serious.

The resignation of Whittaker was expected here, but was a surprise at the time of its coming. Mr. Whittaker's friends here are unshaken in their belief in his integrity, although they felt that he had been unwise in his choice of the time to tender his resignation.

The members met at 10 o'clock and accepted Whittaker's resignation. The board has not gone into the matter of electing a successor to Whittaker and it is doubtful whether this will be done today. Leon Leaf is acting superintendent.

ARMY TENTS FOR G. A. R.

Washington, July 5.—The secretary of war is authorized by a house resolution passed by the senate today to loan cots and tents for use of the forty-third national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic to be held at Salt Lake City, Utah.

WHILE FAMILY WAS AWAY TOOK SUIT AND MONEY

Robber Entered Rothschild Home Saturday and Left Jewelry.

While the family was away for a short time on Saturday evening, the residence of Henry Rothschild at 516 West Washington street, was entered by a burglar and a suit and $116 taken from Mr. Rothschild's room on the upper floor. All about the residence were pieces of silverware and upstairs a number of jewelry pieces but these the robber left untouched. A man wearing a suit like that taken was seen last night walking westward along the Erie Plate tracks but he was too far away to keep sight of. The man probably entered the house through a rear window or door. He apparently did not want to bother with any cumbersome silverware as the dining room was not in the least disturbed. The robber even left the vest of the suit he wanted, taking only the coat and pants. Mr. Rothschild later took the vest to the police station that the suit might be identified if the man should be arrested.

Hoffman's Lost Fern Plants.

Several large fern plants on the porch of A. E. Hoffman's residence at the corner of West Wayne street and Broadway were also stolen Saturday evening but no clue has been secured in regard to the robber or robbers.

SAW WRIGHT MAKE A FLIGHT IN HIS AIRSHIP

T. J. Logan Witnessed Wonderful Exhibition at Fort Meyer.

Attorney Thomas J. Logan, who returned Sunday evening from a professional trip to Washington, was fortunate enough to witness one of the exhibition flights of Orville Wright in his aeroplane at Fort Meyer during his stay in the east.

Mr. Logan made the trip out to the Fort Meyer grounds Thursday afternoon, and while the crowd of spectators was so large that it was impossible for him to press his way closely to the machine, he obtained an excellent view of the flight. The aerial navigator rose to a height of about seventy-five feet and made nine circuits of the acre-parade ground where the test was given. The airship worked perfectly, and Mr. Wright manifested his absolute control of the mechanism, in ascent, maneuver and descent. No accident even of the slightest character marred the exhibition.

BOTH BRUISERS IN HIGH STATE OF CONFIDENCE

Ketchell and Papke Maul Each for the Fourth Time Today.

San Francisco, July 5.—Two more confident men perhaps never entered a ring than Stanley Ketchell, champion middle weight of the world, and Billy Papke, challenger for the title. They strip for a twenty round battle in Conroy's Mission street arena this afternoon. Papke, although the odds were 2 to 1 against him, was supremely confident of his ability to knock out the champion, and would not admit that there was a chance to lose. Papke did only sufficient work yesterday to justify a rub-down, but Ketchell worked as hard, if not harder, than any day.

Both men were in shape to make the stipulated weight of 155 pounds and both seemed in splendid physical shape. Money to wager on the result was plentiful. No fight since the Burns-Squires affair and the last two contests between Joe Gans and Battling Nelson has attracted so much attention here. Indications were that the arena would be filled with a record breaking crowd, a large number coming from outside points.

JACKIES KEEP THE DAY.

Boston, Mass., July 5.—Five thousand men of Uncle Sam's navy helped Boston celebrate the Fourth of July today while nearly a score of warships including some of the heaviest battleships of the navy riding at their chains in the harbor around the historic old frigate Constitution, formed a picturesque and patriotic foreground for the day's observance.

CONGRESSMAN IS DYING.

New York, July 5.—Representative Francis Bushman, of Tacoma, Wash., who is ill of pneumonia in Roosevelt hospital, was said to be near death.

SAME OLD FOURTH BUT A DAY LATE

Fort Wayne in Observance of Nation's Natal Anniversary.

WEATHER MAN NOT ON GOOD BEHAVIOR

Rainy Drizzle Marked Forenoon—Business Largely Suspended.

It's the same old Fourth, but Fort Wayne is observing it a day late this year from the fact that the 133rd birthday anniversary of our much-loved Uncle Samuel happened to fall on Sunday. The small boy with his noise-making batteries opened the attack Saturday, maintaining a sort of de-autory fire at intervals Sunday and opened the bombardment in earnest this morning.

The city gave itself over to an observance of the holiday this morning, but the weather man proved perverse. There was an autumn chill in the air and the forenoon was marred by a cheerless drizzle of rain that began falling shortly after 10 o'clock.

City Suspends Business.

Fort Wayne suspended business Saturday evening until Tuesday morning, and some thousands of people hid themselves away to the lake resorts to remain until the din of the Fourth was safely over. They have no doubt escaped the noise safely, but the weather is not of the sort that impels one to respond to the lure of the lakes, and in all probability a lot of the pilgrims are just now wishing themselves safely back home.

Evident progress has been made in Fort Wayne toward the "sane" Fourth of July, for the sum-total of noise this year is much below the general average in former years. There was but a small proportion of the noisy street revelry and the din of the holiday which characterized the Fourth of other years, and a correspondingly smaller hospital list of maimed patriots.

Rain Hits the Picnics.

Public buildings, wholesale houses, stores and factories were very generally closed for the day, and the most largely attended events were the picnics at the parks arranged by various city church congregations. These started auspiciously, but the rain of the morning interfered largely with the day's program.

Other amusements provided for the day included morning and afternoon games with Dayton at the baseball park, matinee races at the Driving park, a special program at Robson park with the battle in the clouds this evening, and two performances this evening at the airdome summer theaters.

There was a liberal display of the national colors in flags and bunting all over the city, in business and residence districts alike, but the downtown crowds were not large during the earlier portions of the day.

THE WEATHER.

Chicago, July 5.—Illinois and Indiana—Unsettled weather tonight and Tuesday with showers.

Lower Michigan—Increasing cloudiness with showers tonight and Tuesday.

Ohio—Showers tonight and Tuesday warmer Tuesday.

SIGNERS OF THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

READY WITH REPORT FOR PERMANENT ASSOCIATION

Officers and 129 Directors
Recommended for Civic Organization.

Chairman R. B. Hanna's special committee completed its work Saturday evening and is now ready to report its plan for a permanent civic organization.

Recommendations for officers made as follows: President, C. H. Worden; vice president, Dr. L. F. Drayer; secretary, R. B. Hanna; treasurer, W. H. Schellman; executive committee, the officers above named and L. D. Redding, S. M. Foster, Louis Fox, W. E. Mossman, Rabbi W. Ettelson.

NOT SO EASY FOR SCOTT. Some of the jury wanted a severe penalty.

That J. B. Scott, convicted at Columbia City Friday of manslaughter for the slaying of Walter Thurston in the saloon in this city last January, was at times in peril of a more serious finding than manslaughter is shown by this extract from the Columbia City Commercial-Mall's report of the deliberations in the jury room:

"It is understood that at no time was a ballot cast in the jury room for an acquittal, and that once or twice there was one vote for first degree murder. It is also said that on the first ballot the vote stood six to five in favor of the verdict finally reached. At one time the vote was six even, and then finally dropped to eleven to one for manslaughter it is reported."

NEW ALPINE OPENED.

Austrian Emperor Officially at Tauren Railroad.

Gasteln, Austria, July 5.—The Tauren railroad, the new Alpine line connecting Gasteln and Spital, was officially opened by Emperor Francis Joseph today in the presence of a large gathering of Austrian aristocrats, the ministers of the empire, members of parliament and the public.

So great were the engineering difficulties that had to be overcome in the construction of this line that although only three miles it cost $2,500,000. Eight years were required for the completion of the Tauren tunnel. The railroad greatly shortens the distance between central Europe and the Adriatic.

HOCKEMEYER GETS A LITTLE TIME TO THINK

Caught Dead to Rights But Would Not Plead to Charge.

When Henry Hockemeyer, who conducts a saloon and restaurant on Calhoun street, near Jefferson, was arrested on the charge this morning of admitting persons other than members of his family into his saloon Sunday he did not enter a plea, but through Judge R. B. Drebbelius asked a continuance until Thursday, which was granted.

Hockemeyer was doing business openly and had an aproned bartender on duty about a dozen customers lined up before the bar when Patrolman Bob Dickson walked into the place. The restaurant in the rear has an entrance on Jefferson street that was doing duty as a Sunday entrance. This is the first open violation of the police have discovered since the lid went on and in all of the other cases only a few drinks have been given or sold to friends and no attempt has been made to do business as it was done before the saloonkeepers asked the mayor to close them up on the Sabbath.

Patrolman Dickson has a tip that the Home billiard hall was open also, but he did not have evidence enough to make an affidavit and he is investigating the matter.

Plain Drunks on Hand. A man who gave the name of Joseph Smith was fined $5 and costs for drunkenness and he paid up. He came over from Mansfield, O., to celebrate the Fourth and he got hold of a fighting brand. He first tried to clean out the Randall hotel early Sunday morning and when the patrol arrived he slipped a brick at Sergeant Markender.

The fellow put up a vicious fight all the way to the station. David McGinnis met a man whom he didn't know by name and took three or four drinks out of a bottle. He got $1 and costs.

John Sullivan was heckling on the street and was drunk at the time and he drew $1 and costs.

Frank Fitzgerald was placed in the hands of Rev. George M. Cooper for a week to see if he can be kept sober. If he can't he will be sent over for four months.

LAKE CHAMPLAIN

the guests of the state of Vermont. Governor Hughes, of New York, and Governor Prouty, of Vermont, with state committee and their guests participated in today's exercises.

Had a Sham Battle.

The program included a sham battle between companies of the Tenth regiment, which has been in camp for a week at Crown Point, an Indian pageant and literary exercises late in the day. The speakers were Governor Hughes, ex-Mayor Seth Low, of New York, and Judge Albert C. Barnes, of Chicago. An original poem, entitled "Song for the Tercentenary of Lake Champlain" has been composed by Clinton Scollard, of Clinton, N. Y., for the occasion. The Indian drama of "Hilawatha," which formed a picturesque part of the day's program, was produced by 150 Indians, descendants of the Algonquins and Iroquois, who participated in Champlain's battle. The production, under the direction of L. O. Armstrong, of Montreal, was given on a floating island constructed on barges.

Scenic Effects. The island, which is several hundred feet in length, depicts among other scenic effects a stockade, the point of attack in the battle by the besieging bands of Indians who reach the beach in canoes. Ticonderoga is to be the scene of tomorrow's observance. Wednesday at Plattsburgh will be the big day of the celebration. Thursday, Burlington, Vt., will be the center of interest and Friday exercises will be held at Isle La Motte, at the northern end of the lake. At each of these places Indian pageants will be held, the floating island having been so constructed that it can be towed from place to place on the lake.

PRESIDENT IS THERE.

Norwich, July 5.—With the clanging of bells and booming of guns the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the settlement of the town was ushered in today.

At 10 a. m. President Wm. H. Taft and party, including Capt. Butt, military aide, and Assistant Secretary Alschuler, arrived on a special train from Boston as guests of the committee of arrangements. Space had been roped off at the station and the president was greeted by Mayor Castello Lippitt, two members of the aldermanic boards, the selectmen and Mr. Tracey, of the executive committee. As the president appeared a battery of Geers Hill fired the salute of twenty-one guns.

VERDICT OF WILFUL MURDER.

Return is Rendered in Case of Slaying of Willis.

London, July 5.—A verdict of wilful murder has been rendered in the case of Lieut. Col. Sir William Hutt Curzon Willis, political aide to Lord Morley, the Indian secretary. Willis was shot by Madaral Dhinargel, an Indian student, the night of July 1, at the conclusion of a public gathering at the Imperial Institute in London. That the student had for some time contemplated an attempt at the assassination was indicated by records found in his room, showing that he had been practicing steadily with a pistol since last January. The notebook gave the results of his shots at varying distances.

WRIGHT MAKING A NEW WING.

Dayton, July 5.—Orville Wright, who arrived home yesterday, is hard at work in the shop today making a new cloth cover for the lower plane of the machine that was injured by collision with a tree in the last flight at Fort Meyer. To the Associated Press correspondent he expressed himself as greatly pleased with the conduct of the aeroplane in gliding safely to the ground when the motor stopped. He does not expect to resume flights until next week.

HAYTIEN GENERAL IN ACCIDENT.

Port Au Prince, Hayti, July 5.—Gen. Antoine Simon, the president of Hayti, had a narrow escape in a serious railroad accident near Beaudet last night. The presidential train collided with a freight train. Several cars were wrecked and ten soldiers were killed. The president was not hurt and after giving orders for the clearing away of the wreckage and caring for the injured he mounted a horse and rode back into Port Au Prince.

SCENE IS A DAZZLE
OF PYROTECHNIC
BEAUTY

"Battle in the Clouds"
Given at Robison Park
Wonderful Spectacle.

Pain's latest pyrotechnic spectacle, "The Battle in the Clouds," had its first production west of New York at Robison park Saturday night and a large assemblage of spectators filled the arena and gazed with astonishment and admiration at the splendor and novelty of the scenes.

Last night a much larger crowd looked at the production and added its hearty approval to the approbation of the opening attendance.

Pain has achieved some tremendous results in his combinations of the stage spectacle and fireworks, but has done nothing that so strongly clutches the popular imagination as this latest, with its prophetic incidents and heroic romanticism. "The Battle in the Clouds," unlike "Pompeii," "Fort Arthur," "Manila," and others, is not historical. It is prophetic. Time is lugged forward a century, when aerial navigation is the rule and order of transportation, when there is interplanetary communication, when the secret of radio-activity has been solved and its cataclysmic forces harnessed, when war means not conquest but annihilation.

It is a captivating fancy and is wrought out with a plausibility and dramatic daring that unite to make the spectacle the most popular the genius of Pain and his marvelous staff have ever developed for public diversion.

The pyrotechnics are marvelous and the theatrical phases of the presentation easily understood. For many years Pain has been the undisputed premier in this fashion of popular amusement and "The Battle in the Clouds" will add to his reputation.

City of Science; Year, 2000. The scene of the spectacle is laid in the City of Science in the year 2000, and more than 200 Fort Wayne supernumeraries are used in the production. "The minute city is laid out on a scale of imposing grandeur. The air has been conquered; fire, radium, wireless communication and millions of other things have been solved, and the scene opens with the city en fête to celebrate the first communication with Mars. There are military reviews, participated in by 200 Fort Wayne supernumeraries in the costumes of 2000 A. D. Here are brought in some acrobatic specialties which for originality and actual merit have never had an equal. The Hottentots, the swinging ring team and Jean and Marie Wentzman in the most daring act of all on the high wire were the leaders.

The action is rapid and interesting. One sees, the manning of airships, the signaling by "wireless," the arrival of the royal guards, the entrance of King Pyro, ruler of the City of Science, and his queen, Electra, the royal salute, the review of troops and other imposing maneuvers.

But Mars is jealous of the earth's progress, and a Martian airship arrives on the scene with an ultimatum. The world of science bids defiance and prepares for war. Then comes the signaling to Mars, the repulse of the scouting airships, the bombardment by airships, the explosion of the magazine, the bursting of the airship and the fiery destruction of the city just as victory comes in the battle in the clouds.

Closing the performance is a regal pyrotechnic display such as the Pains alone can give. There are skyrockets, star showers, the jumping jack, the Japanese fan and a myriad of special features, including "The Last Rose of Summer" and the beautiful finale, "Niagara Falls." The display as a whole is one of rare beauty.

Turbine Fans For American Dread-noughts.

For the forced draft equipment of the United States battleships Delaware and North Dakota twenty-eight turbine fans, each with a capacity of 24,000 cubic feet a minute, have been built at the Troy works of the Sirocco Engineering company.

Although only twenty-seven inches in diameter, the fourteen Sirocco turbine fans to be installed on each of the United States Dreadnoughts supply 836,000 cubic feet of air every minute to keep the fires roaring under the boilers of these monster war vessels. It is an enormous output for their small size that has led to the adoption of this type of fan on all the principal transatlantic liners, in European navies and now by the United States naval authorities. The fans are built on the same principle as a "squirrel cage" drum surrounded by sixty or more narrow blades.

DEATH HAS CLAIMED
YOUNG MAN OF PROMISE

John Paul Hammond Ex-pires at Lutheran Hospital—Other Deaths.

John Paul Hammond, son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Hammond, of 1230 Fairfield avenue, died at 5 o'clock this morning at the Lutheran hospital at the age of 16 years, 10 months and 2 days. The bereaved father is the deputy county clerk for the circuit court.

The young man was born in Bluffton, but had lived in Fort Wayne for eleven years, and had just completed his first year in high school with marked credit. He was a lad of fine character and much promise, and had many friends. On June 25 he submitted to an operation for appendicitis, and a week later a second operation to relieve bowel adhesions became necessary. From the shock of the double ordeal he was unable to rally and death was the result.

The funeral services will be held at Williamsport on Wednesday.

MANSDOERFER.

Margaret E. Mansdorfer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Mansdorfer, 501 East Sutherland street, died at 6 o'clock Sunday morning from a complication of diseases at the age of 5 years, 8 months and 20 days.

Funeral services Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence, Rev. John H. Bosch officiating; interment at Lindenwood.

FUNERAL NOTICES.

Keller.—Funeral services of Otto C. Keller will be held Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 from the residence, 1113 Wall street, and at 2 o'clock from St. John's Lutheran church.

Cartridge Wad in Finger.

The paper wad of a blank cartridge was shot into a finger on the left hand of the eight-year-old son of S. F. Evans, 2503 Lafayette street, Sunday afternoon. The boy's hand was also severely burnt, the accident resulting from over-anxiety to pull the trigger of the gun. The injury is not considered serious and Dr. John Harrod says that the boy will be about within a few days.

DAY'S CELEBRATION IS VERY MUCH OF SANE VARIETY

Rain Put Early Damper on Enthusiasts and Mishaps are Very Few.

Advocates of a "Sane Fourth" can well be pleased with the celebration this year. Until noon today the burns and other mishaps resulting from the enthusiastic celebrating number less than half a dozen, though there are probably a number who have been slightly burned yet who continue in the celebration. Not all of these accidents occurred today, most of them having taken place Sunday afternoon. And in no cases are the injuries more than painful.

The firing of crackers and other explosives this morning was considerably lessened as the clouds gathered overhead and when the rain began, it was only occasionally that any evidence that today is being celebrated as the Fourth could be heard. The shooting at all times since the first celebrators began getting busy on Saturday night has been exceedingly moderate. It may be due to the fact that the celebration extends over three days that the number of unhappy occurrences is so small.

Perhaps the most severely injured thus far of any is Miss Cone, daughter of Delvin B. Cone, 3425 Thompson avenue. Miss Cone was lighting a large fire-cracker in her hand at her home Sunday afternoon about 2 o'clock when the cracker prematurely exploded and badly burnt the young lady's hand and arm up to the wrist. The burns are only of the outer skin but are very painful and will cause much inconvenience for several days. Dr. E. B. McKeehan dressed the injuries.

Cartridge Wad in Finger.

The paper wad of a blank cartridge was shot into a finger on the left hand of the eight-year-old son of S. F. Evans, 2503 Lafayette street, Sunday afternoon. The boy's hand was also severely burnt, the accident resulting from over-anxiety to pull the trigger of the gun. The injury is not considered serious and Dr. John Harrod says that the boy will be about within a few days.

HIGH FUNCTIONARY ON TRIAL.

Privy Councillor Hammann in Berlin Under Perjury Charge.

Berlin, July 5.—The trial of Privy Councillor Dr. Hammann on charge of perjury, alleged to have been committed in connection with the divorce of the woman who is now his wife, was begun here today. Dr. Hammann is director of the foreign office and his relations with Chancellor von Buelow are intimate and confidential. The former husband of the present Frau Hammann, Professor Schmidtz, publicly accused Dr. Hammann of perjury, whereupon the doctor required the state prosecutor to bring the matter to trial. The case is attracting great local attention owing to the position of the principals. The hearing is private.

LETTER CARRIERS MEET.

Evansville, Ind., July 5.—The tenth annual state convention of the National Association of Letter Carriers of Indiana convened here today. Delegates are here from Indianapolis, Terre Haute, Muncie, Fort Wayne, South Bend, Anderson, Elwood, Seymour, Columbus, Mt. Vernon, Jeffersonville, New Albany, Washington, Vincennes and many other cities in the state. A banquet will be held tonight.

The cracker exploded before the lad could remove his face, however, and he was painfully burned about the face and eyes by powder. He was brought to the office of Dr. Drayer on a Broadway street car and his injuries dressed. No serious effects are to be anticipated from the burns.

The Sunday Afternoon Burning.

Louis Kropp's 12-year-old son was one of the few injured on Sunday and his injuries consist of burns from a "Happy Hooligan" cracker about the face, neck and arms. He was standing in front of Bauer's drug store on Wells street and after boring a hole in the cracker and assembling the powder, applied a match with his face close to it. The lad's eyebrows were singed off and Dr. Kimmel says it will be some time before he will be entirely over the accident. The lad's father is a Lake Erie engineer and the family home is at 511 Fourth street.

Bulger Hurt at Park.

Corliss Bulger, one of the lessees of Robison park, is laid up with a badly lacerated knee and other bruises as the result of coming into contact with one of the deer at the park menagerie. A small boy had thrown a firecracker within the enclosure surrounding the deer, causing one of them to break the fence and to jump into the larger enclosure. Bulger was within and endeavored to stop the deer but was knocked down. The animal was caught later and placed in a separate cage.

DEDICATED TO A PROPOSITION.

Six score and thirteen years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that once a year we shall out, shoot up the town and burn it low. Today we are engaged in a great struggle to test whether a nation so conceived and so dedicated is still making good on the job. As for the fathers, each in his "low green tent," let peace be theirs. The nation is still at it and leaving nothing to be desired. We don't pay so much attention to the solemn declaration as its revered framers may have expected from posterity, but we have improved, from generation to generation, in the making of noise and the mangling of our bodies. The modern breed of the proud bird, whose home is high in heaven, doesn't shrink quite as shrill as its ancestral fowl the while free sons of men twist the British lion's tail with less vehemence than was the wont in a more effervescent day, but liberty's host and freedom's band can do things with high explosives and foul smelling fies that the old Continentals in their ragged regimentals no more dreamt of than they did of Coney Island, woman suffrage or county option. They mangled the hated foe with hand-forged pikes and reeking flintlock charged with wrought nails or pewter slugs. We rend our own flesh and destroy the innocent bystander with hellish things of dynamite and gun cotton and make noises, create stinks and fire buildings with such devices as only the carnate genius of the infernal one could invent. When Freedom from her mountain height looks down on the annual celebration of the day we celebrate she beholds a land reeking with blood, filled with the groans of the scorched and maimed, with more dead, outright or doomed to inevitable death by the slow agonies of tetanus, together with more wounded than fell or were wounded of Prescott's devoted band in the first great battle of the war that gave us the grand hurrah, hurrah and our national independence. The fathers fought and the fathers bled for the Fourth of July and to make it good, but the fathers did not do all the bleeding for the day, not by uncounted buckets full. We have been long at it and are still keeping it up. And so annually shall we continue by some hundreds of dead and some thousands of wounded until the abstract proposition of the safe and sane becomes the statute law in the hands of authority that isn't afraid enforcement may have unpleasant consequences at the next election. The man who doesn't like scattering fire, shattering explosions, battering bombs and chattering teeth isn't the dog with his day—not yet! He's most likely to be regarded as a mollycoddle if not an undesirable citizen.

So, what's the use.

WHITTAKER RESIGNATION.

Fast on the beginning of an official inquiry into affairs of the state reformatory at Jeffersonville Superintendent W. H. Whittaker has resigned. This is not likely to have any influence on the course of the investigation or in any wise to modify its thoroughness. Governor Marshall has set out upon an inquiry and he is not a man to acquit himself of such a public duty in perfunctory manner. The resignation of the superintendent merely simplifies processes and strips the inquiry of certain delicacies and possible embarrassments.

Mr. Whittaker's immersion in these latest of what appear to be regularly recurrent distresses at Jeffersonville is exceedingly to be regretted. In most of its aspects his administration of the reformatory has been commendable and in some of them signally praiseworthy. He is an intensely humane man and has sought, no doubt, to do the best he could for his charges. In discharge of the purely ethical side of his duties he has laid no ground for just complaint or hurtful criticism. As the business administrator of the reformatory he has failed down somewhat lamentable, as many another man of his character and caliber has done in like situations. As a superintendent of penal methods and supervisor of reformatory processes he has been admirable. As a business executor the same unfortunately cannot be said.

Governor Marshall is going quietly and seriously about this unpleasant business, which those who know him can very well conceive is to him a painful duty he is morally bound to discharge. Of one thing the public may be sure. Governor Marshall will put no one under any burden of injustice, nor will any gully person escape.

The Cuban congress adjourned without passing the annual budget, but it turned the cock-right bill into national law and got the wheels started for the federal lottery. The which Cuba's solicitous friends in the mother republic may take with the liveliest assurance as evidence of national tranquility and governmental stability.

We shall meet, but we shall miss him; there will be a vacant chair. However, the doctors do amazing things at saving the eyesight and can patch up a bunch of mangled digits in a really wonderful way.

Governor Marshall is starting a stir much sooner than Gov. Hanly began to claw ugly things up from the bottom. Looks as though there might be more where this came from.

Always something mussy doing at Jeffersonville. Maybe it's the atmosphere. Why not move the reformatory?

Still you've got to look at it from somewhat the boy's point of view.

Historic Old Cannon is Yet Standing as a Silent Sentinel.

The historic old cannon which boomed forth its salutes on the occasion of that most notable Fourth of July celebration held in Fort Wayne when the old Vabash and Erie canal was formally opened on July 4, 1843, the story of which was told in The Sentinel Saturday, may still be seen standing a silent sentinel in front of the old Randall homestead on East Berry street, now the home of Mrs. Clark Fairbank, the daughter of the pioneer mayor. It is imbedded muzzle upwards in the earth at the end of the street. Years have corroded the old piece once used by British soldiers against the Americans in the war of 1812, and the modern generation of Fort Wayne citizens passes it daily with perhaps no knowledge of the historic interest surrounding the grim old memento with a history that began much earlier than Fort Wayne's most notable Fourth of July celebration sixty-six years ago, in which it played an interesting part.

WHAT DUBUQUE HAS DONE

Remarkable Accomplishment in Civic Improvement in an Iowa City Where Conditions Are Said to Have Been Strikingly Similar to Those in Fort Wayne.

Apropos of Fort Wayne's present awakening to the civic improvement idea, the story of what has been accomplished at Dubuque, Iowa, is of particular significance at this time. It is the more interesting locally from the fact that conditions in Dubuque are said to have been strikingly similar to those in Fort Wayne. The story of what Dubuque has done was written by Charles Mulford Robinson, the civic improvement expert who has been retained to advise Fort Wayne along similar lines. It is reproduced from Civic Improvement, and is as follows:

Dubuque's Awakening.

The story of a recent civic movement in Dubuque is the story of a town that discovered itself. About a year ago, largely through the energy of a few members of a woman's club, a committee was formed representing that club, the Commercial club and the Trades and Labor congress. It was not an enthusiastic committee. It was more or less dominated by the faith of one woman, that if an outside authority could be brought to Dubuque to discuss and settle a dispute, park question, something might happen. The committee itself was divided regarding the park. Some of the members thought it should be on an island lying in the Mississippi, opposite the town; others, doubtful as to the practicability of that site, thought some better one might be found. They were inclined to listen with polite interest to a vague, tentative suggestion that the bluff at Eagle Point would answer the purpose. The committee, good naturedly yielding to the faith of its organizer, finally invited the outside authority to visit the town. Unfortunately, the time when he could come was a time when the woman who believed and dared had to be away. His prospects were not encouraging.

Dubuque is an old town, as cities go in the middle west. One by one the great viewpoints offered by its bluffs have been taken by institutions or individuals and the citizens have been left with a little. The town, free from any signs of a boom, has grown slowly. It is as conservative as a New England community, as hard, its own citizens said, to move. There never had been such a thing as civic enthusiasm.

But the outsider, because he was an outsider, who had come to study the city and discover its possibilities, soon made up his mind as to where the park ought to be, and then wrote a report that not only gave his reasons for selecting the bluff, but said a great many other things about the town. He told the people they had something unique. He urged them not only to preserve Eagle Point, a stunning rock with great river views, for public enjoyment as a park, but to reclaim the beautiful ridge of bluffs that extended through the town and that was finding its civic usefulness as a site for billboards. He believed that behind the billboards there were wild flowers; that vines would soften and make beautiful the rock faces; and he reminded them that while they boasted of all the Lord had done for Dubuque, humility and shame should overwhelm them at the thought of how little man had done. Then he went away and the committee ordered his report printed.

That phrase about the work of the Lord and the work of man for Dubuque, stuck. It began to be quoted and got into the daily thought of the citizens. A few women started a movement to get the billboards off the most conspicuous bluff. The owner of it said if they would pay him a little more rent than the advertisers paid, he would take down the boards, but, he added, the bluff was for sale and the next owner might get a better contract. So the women started to raise money to buy the bluff, a movement foredoomed to failure, many said, because such a thing never had been done in Dubuque before. But the money came in easily and rapidly. Seven or eight hundred dollars was soon in hand. The bluff was bought, and more of it than was originally intended, and when the old billboards were torn down it was found that there were wild flowers behind them where no one had ever seen them, and that the rock wall was beautiful with trailing vines. "Let us buy more bluffs," said the people.

But now the men were taking notice. If Dubuque will provide money so readily for such a purpose, it may do more, they argued. The bluffs have always been here and they always will be and their only possible value is for billboards. The park site, however, may be lost to us at any time. It was ascertained that $20,000 would buy eighty-five acres of the high, rolling land at Eagle Point. "Let us concentrate our effort upon that. If the people would subscribe $10,000, perhaps we could get the owner to accept the balance in four annual payments of $2,500 each to be appropriated by the city." A few rich citizens were seen. One or two gave $500; one gave $1,000. Several declined to take any part in an undertaking so foolhardy. But money in small amounts came steadily in. In sums of $100 down to one dollar the fund was growing. The committee was well received, and with leaps the fund rose to $10,000. The city council agreed to make the four annual appropriations, and the deed to the property was drawn and signed and deposited with a trustee. Dubuque had a magnificent tract of land for a park. The people had done what nobody, not even the people themselves, believed they could do.

Still the money came in. A great deal of the success undoubtedly was due to the committee's own enthusiasm and to the esteem in which it was held, and the general confidence in its wisdom. The staunch adherents of the island site had accepted the dictum of the outsider, and had given as freely as did any others. Twelve thousand dollars was needed, fifteen thousand, and the committee bought more land, making 120 acres instead of eighty-five, and insuring a two-mile drive overlooking the Mississippi. At the end of October, when the writer was in Dubuque, the fund had reached $18,500, and still it was growing every day. One of the committee had passed together the deposit slips, for the money was paid in cash, and opposite each entry was the name of the donor. The figures were typewritten and the slip, with the lines close together, was upwards of seven feet long.

The town is full of stories of the subscription. A few must suffice. In the Fifth ward, a district made up of laboring people most of whom own their little homes, only three out of a list of 150 declined to give. An elderly lady declined at first to subscribe on the ground that she would never be able to visit the park. But she had hardly stated her reason before she apologized. "I ought not to talk like that," she said. "The park is not for me, but for Dubuque," and she gave generously. A woman who goes out to clean by the day was visited, for the park is for everybody. She murmured, objecting that she was too poor to give. Her son, who was present, gave five dollars. Then his mother whispered to him. "Doesn't she want you to give it?" asked the committee man, quite willing to return the money. "Why, yes," the boy said. "That is all right and now she says she wants to give you just as much." A younger daughter, who also works by the day, came in. "Will you take one doll from me?" she asked.

The great thing about it all is the development of civic spirit. As was said at the beginning, a town has discovered itself. It has found a civic spirit which it did not know existed. Landscape architects have been engaged, and the park is being developed, but the people are already taking Sunday walks there. They know it is their park. Not one of the donors but feels a sense of proprietorship, a personal interest, a joyous self-congratulation in the town's great possession.

And the bluffs in town? Large and small owners have come forward with the promise to keep off the billboards and preserve this unique attraction of the city. There is no longer need to buy much more of them, and on the top of one a loop drive for the public has been offered. The city council is putting center parking through a wide avenue which, with great civic possibilities, has long been neglected; and these councilmen, whose salary is $300 a year, paid the other day for the best obtainable New York advice regarding the location of a drinking fountain for horses which is to be on the avenue. In the street cars a card, among other advertisements, bears the signature of the woman's club, and asks for old newspapers and magazines, which are being collected for a fund "to beautify our city."

It is a great story, but unless you know a town of the type of the Dubuque of a year ago, you hardly know how great it is. Only Dubuque itself realizes that.

IN THE CITY'S CHURCHES*SUNDAY WAS A DAY OF MUCH PULPIT INSPIRATION

Words of Patriotism from Many Preachers Stirred
all Who Heard Them.

Full of patriotism and inspiring to the many who heard them were the words uttered from many Fort Wayne pulpits on Sunday when some of the Fourth of July celebrators were duly thoughtful to postpone their celebration until Monday. From practically every pulpit in the city yesterday,
the preachers spoke upon some subject of patriotism or national interest and while the enthusiasm of young Ameri-canhood was sufficient in some cases for the noise incident to the day to place through the churches, there was little disturbance due to this.

Numerous and profound were the tributes paid the American flag, the great men of this country who have aided in molding the outlines of history. And in all the sermons there was the general purpose to show that the vein of religion runs through all chronicles of any nation or country and that without religion, there is little country.

Many Heard Rev. Travis.
The sermon of Rev. C. Claud Travis upon "The Mission of the United States" at the Wayne Street Methodist Episcopal church was heard by a large congregation including many from the patriotic organizations in the city who had been extended an especial invitation. The musical program was carried out by the church choir,
quartet and Battery B military band.
The decorations and surroundings
were all of a Fourth of July nature.

"If this nation would remain a leader of nations, there are two things it must teach," said Rev. Travis. "First, it must demonstrate the purpose of the Christian religion. God lives on every page of American history." Rev.
Travis then brought out how there has been one long and continual list
of heroes who have aided and saved nations and countries and these men have all been God-loving. In detailing in regards to America, Rev. Travis mentioned a number of the early explorers, coming down through Penn.
Oglethorpe, Franklin, Washington, Lincoln, McKinley and the unforgettable Teddy.

Rev. Averill's Sermon.
What constitutes freedom and real patriotism was the general theme of a practical and fitting sermon by Rev.
E. W. Averill at Trinity Episcopal church yesterday morning. After a brief reference to the reason for the celebration of the Fourth as a national holiday Rev. Averill led to the responsibility of the individual not only to himself but to his family, to his country and to his God. He contrasted the patriotism of Washington with the general inclination of today to keep rather than to give, to abuse of privileges instead of upholding the laws of the country as well as the moral law. Mr. Averill further called attention to the mistaken idea that noise and disturbance are indications of patriotism; to the selfishness and greed of men in power of office,
of state and nation; of the oppression
of the great monopolies and their stolen wealth; to the carelessness of parents in laxity of control and discipline of their children; and to the duty of the citizen to do his part towards maintaining law and decency in his own city and declared the necessity of a religion and a belief in God and Jesus Christ necessary as a means towards the highest type of citizenship.

Christ's Flag Above All.
Though banners and flags are usually significant of countries, they are also emblems of Christ, said Rev. Henry T. Sell in his sermon at the union meeting of the congregations of the Plymouth Congregational and First Baptist churches at the latter Sunday evening. Rev. Sell traced the history and characterized a number of flags in the world, coming down to the thought that the flag of Christ is always placed above any other, meaning that it is superior.

"It is not without significance that the flags of England, Germany and other nations bear upon them the cross of Christ and that our flag should fly beneath the 'Cross' flag of our navy.
It is literally true that we have set up
our banners in the name of God."
Rev. Sell followed up this thought by showing that Christ was a patriot and the bible an agent of patriotism;
that Christ carried out many deeds of patriotism in discovering the individuals in the state of early ages and convincing them that they could join with the governing forces in assuming some of the responsibilities of the nations. Only through Christ, therefore, can worlds be brought together and Dr. Sell concluded by appealing for a union of all flags in reality and not in form under the stainless flag of Our Redeemer and Our King.

Rev. Todd on America.
America as the nation for attaining world-wide imperialism without war
was the thought for which Rev. E. M.
Todd strove in his sermon on "America's Opportunity" at the West Jetterson street Church of Christ on Sunday. In the early ages there was no thought of winning in any other way than by mere force and the idea of conquering through the higher means is still an unrealized one. Some people must become its advocate and incarnation—why not America? America is fitted by her geographical conditions, her constitution, her past history, her mixed population, as no other country is, to take up the "burden." If she ever is to attain the supremacy it must be by the superiority of her institutions; "she must make justice free and possible to all; she must give to the world the highest type of religion; she must devote herself assiduously to education; she must attain of the Lord and out of the world of abstract speculation in which such a superiority now rests

and make it a "real thing."
Emphasizing the great principles
upon which the Declaration of Independence is founded, Rev. Frank M.
Fox, at the Third Presbyterian church,
delivered a most thoughtful sermon Sunday. He brought out that all men are by nature free and equal in their rights, that they can not be taxed without their consent and that they may delegate their power of administration to representatives. These principles he said belong to all thinking men and resulted in the motives that brought the English-Puritans, the Hollanders, the Quakers, the Scotch-Irish and the Huguenots to this country.

"The nation once disregarded those principles in its treatment of the negroes and it cost her millions of dollars and thousands of lives, but it forced a demonstration that negroes are men and not mere cattle. These principles are a part of man's consciousness and a part of God's great truth and the truth if not only eternal,
but universal and altruistic.

"Christian Patriotism" was the subject upon which Rev. W. P. Herron spoke to a large congregation at the Simpson Methodist Episcopal church Sunday and he made a strong plea for greater spiritual patriotism, pointing out that the higher law includes the lower. The true citizen is one that is true to the principles, ideas and laws of the higher patriotism of man.

MANY AT BOTH SERVICES.

Corner Stone Laying in Lake Township Was Impressive Affair.

The laying of the corner stone of the new St. John's Lutheran church in Lake township Sunday morning was even more successful than hoped for,
as one of the largest crowds ever assembled in that vicinity gathered to witness the placing of the stone by Rev. J. P. Meyer. The sermons of Rev.
J. C. Koepplin, of Detroit, both in the morning at the present church, and in the afternoon upon the site of the new church, were excellently given and received. Following the afternoon service, which was in German, those present enjoyed something of a social time.

C. E. Meeting.

There will be a business meeting of

COMPANY IS MAKING
BIG PURCHASE OF CARS

Six Already on Way for Fort Wayne Lines;
Others to Follow.

It develops that the car purchase by the Fort Wayne and Wabash Valley Traction company is much greater than was at first announced; that instead of ten new cars for the city lines, twenty will be put in service, and that the car purchases for city and interurban lines will cost a total of $140,000.

Six of the new Fort Wayne cars
have already been shipped from Cincinnati and will reach Fort Wayne this week. Tomorrow General Manager
Emmons and Master Mechanic Jacques will leave for Schenectady and Philadelphia to witness the efficiency tests demanded under the agreement by which the remainder of the new rolling stock is being purchased.

The total purchase will include twenty-six cars, twenty of which will be used in Fort Wayne, four new interurban passenger cars of the 303 type, two interurban freight cars, four interurban freight trailers and ten interurban gondolas.

ENTERTAINED THE KAISER.

liam was entertained at dinner on board the yacht Utowana last night by Allison V. Armour, of New York.

S.S.S. HEALS SORES AND ULCERS

S. S. S. heals Sores and Ulcers in the very simplest way. It just goes right down into the blood and removes the cause, and the place is bound to heal because the impurities and morbid matters which have been the means of keeping the ulcer open are no longer absorbed from the blood.
External applications of salves, lotions, plasters, etc., can never produce a cure because they do not reach the source of the trouble. At best they can only allay pain or reduce inflammation; such treatment is working on symptoms and not reaching the cause. Every nutritive corpuscle in the blood is weakened or infected, they cannot nourish the fibrous tissue around the place, but instead they constantly discharge into the flesh around the sore a quantity of impure, germ-laden matter which gradually eats into the surrounding healthy tissue and causes the ulcer to enlarge. Since impure blood is responsible for Sores and Ulcers, a medicine that can purify the blood is the only hope of a cure. S. S. S. has long been recognized as the greatest of all blood purifiers, possessing the qualities necessary to remove every impurity from the blood. While curing the sore or ulcer S. S. S.
brings about a healthy condition of the flesh by supplying it with rich, healthy blood, and thus makes the cure permanent and lasting. Book on Sores and Ulcers and any medical advice free to all who write.

Cyrus E. Miller in Bad Shape at Home on Winchester Road.

Cyrus E. Miller, the well-known farmer residing about seven miles south of the city on the Winchester road, is confined to his home suffering from severe pains about the back of his head, his neck and shoulders. On Saturday afternoon he was riding in a horse-drawn wagon when he was thrown and for this purpose had purchased a new bay rope. The rope was attached to the "trip" and as it was descending with Mr. Miller hanging to it broke. Mr. Miller was dropped between two horses standing upon the ground floor and in the ensuing mix-up was kicked in the head and other parts of the body. It may be that his skull is fractured.

The New Norwegian Skirt.

(By Mrs. Jane Ford.)

5 SIZES 22 TO 30 WAIST

There is no doubt that we are to have the plaited skirt again, but not that of the "Fluffy Ruffle" type, which was popular a few seasons past. This year it is to be the Norwegian, with the characteristic ecclesiastical long lines from the waist to lounce depth, at which point is joined a deep plaiting.

The pattern for the skirt offered is cut in five sizes and will fit women from twenty-two to thirty inches waist measure. To copy it for the average woman seven and one-half yards of goods thirty-six inches wide, or six and one-half yards forty-four inches in width are required.

This skirt is easy to make if one understands how. For when the material is cut, the edges of the seams notched and the perforations marked, the rest is simple. First baste the gown together and arrange the under box plait at the back. The skirt is then ready to try on and be fitted, which should be done on the right side, after which the alterations must be marked with chalk or a basting thread, and the seam taken in or let out, as is needed. By working in this way, should there be any difference in the size of one's hips, the alterations will be on the side they are needed.

The seams stitched, pressed, and the belt or binding adjusted, proceed to ascertain the drape where the plaiting is to be applied, which must be an even distance from the floor all around. To do this, find exactly how wide the plaiting will be when finished, and how many inches the lower edge must clear the floor. These measurements together will give the distance from the floor that the top of the plaiting should be.

Mark off the length on a stiff piece of pasteboard or a ruler, and use as a measure for marking the distance on the skirt, first by placing pins in the goods and then running a basting thread.

The piece for the plaiting is first hemmed, and then the plait is basted and pressed into position by placing a damp cloth on the wrong side of the goods and ironing until perfectly dry. Baste the plaiting to the skirt along the line marked, and finish the joining with a strap of the goods.

BUSY DOCTOR

Sometimes Overlooks a Point.

The physician is such a busy man that he sometimes overlooks a valuable point to which his attention may be called by an intelligent patient who is a thinker.

"About a year ago my attention was called to Grape Nuts by one of my patients," says a physician of Cincinnati.

"At the time my own health was bad and I was pretty well run down, but I saw at once that the theories behind Grape Nuts were sound and that if the food was all that was claimed, it was a perfect food.

"So I commenced to use Grape Nuts with cream twice a day and in a short time I began to improve in every way and I am now much stronger, feel better and weigh more than ever before in my life.

"I know that all of this good is due to Grape Nuts and I am firmly convinced that the claims made for the food are true.

"I have recommended, and still recommend, Grape Nuts to a great many of my patients with splendid results, and in some cases the improvement of patients on this fine food has been wonderful.

"As a brain and nerve food, in fact, as a general food, Grape Nuts stands alone."

Look in packages for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville." There's a Reason.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true and full of human interest.

cover more extensively the great science of the study of man than any heretofore private enterprise, combining in an exhibition that is aimed to provide attractive entertainment, and at the same time furnish instruction and knowledge of the peculiarities of fellow beings from distant lands.

As interesting as natural history is regarding the lower animals, there is a science of higher degree on the same lines, the investigation of the peculiarities of the human species. This inquiry is one of the most interesting sciences and is divided into the anthropological or the general covering of the subject, and ethnology, which is the particularization of the manners, customs, costumes, legends and superstitions of individual hordes, tribes and races.

These researches have been mostly confined to the savant and scholar, but the closer approach of the world through modern means of easy communication renders it fitting that the masses should, as in other respects, have their curiosity gratified by being given the chance to investigate.

This seems to be offered them by this season's departure in adding to the Indians, Cowboys, Cosacks, Arabs, Mexican and Military, including in the roster of the "Wild West" and "World Rough Riders," reinforcements of East Indians, South Sea Islanders, Malays, Singalese, Japanese, Moories, Hottentots, Philippines, Hawaiians, Australian Boomerang Throwers, Hindoos and Japanese from the Far East.

These will be presented in action in a program replete with battle scenes, stage coach attacks, wagon train rescues, war dances, scenes of American Indian wars, episodes in the camp life of the American frontier; the superb horsemanship of the "World's Rough Riders" and the games, pastimes, athletic feats, dances, pageants, customs and remarkable fanciful superstitious defiance of personal danger by different clans of individuals among the Oriental visitors.

One act alone by a zealous devotee of fatalistic religion of the Orient will be the climax of so-called thrillers in this city since its foundation, one that depends on no mechanism, but on personal courage, confidence and condition, a physical culture stunt that is startling.

There will be no street parade, as every attention will be concentrated to the giving of perfect performances. Two exhibitions will be given on State street grounds at 2 and 5 p. m.

Says Fred to Bess, in sentence mild, "Do you like crackers?" Then he smiled. (He meant the popping kind, you know, But Bessie didn't know it though.)

Said she, "I like them, Mister Fred, But better still, Perfection Bread." Said Fred, "I think you always will." And then he laughed just fit to kill."

Carrot Soup.

Thirteen ounces of scraped carrots to a quart of gravy. Boil as many red carrots in water as required until tender; then cut up red part and pound it fine, weigh it, and to every thirteen ounces of pounded carrot add a quart of gravy soup, of rich stock, mixed gradually with it; season with salt and red pepper; strain and serve hot with fried bread cut into dice.

Canary Cream.

Dissolve one and one-half heaping tablespoonsful powdered gelatine in one cupful of milk. Put two and one-half cupsful milk into a saucepan, add four tablespoonsful sugar and thinly cut rind of a lemon, allow to boil for three minutes then add gelatine, four beaten yolks of eggs and juice of one-half a lemon, stir until thick. It must not boil. Strain into a wet mold and set away in a cool place. Turn out when set and serve with stewed fruit.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

What the Sentinel Had to Say About Persons and Events Twenty-Five Years Ago.

The doctors did a big business yesterday pulling powder and bullets out of careless boys.
Louis Schroeder, the official scorer of the Fort Wayne club, will travel with the home team for the next five weeks.
The city council passed an ordinance to prevent swine from being kept within the city limits, and ordering the destruction of pigs already in existence.

Fort Wayne celebrated the Fourth yesterday in informal fashion. At the Academy of Music Capt. G. Conkling Richards gave a concert and ball and did an immense business. At DeWald's grove a merry picnic party held forth. At the fair grounds the people of Emanuel's Lutheran church held a picnic with the city band furnishing music. The St. Paul's church Lutherans held a picnic at Mad Anthony park. St. John's Lutherans held a picnic at Riedmiller's grove. At League park the Fort Wayne Reserves defeated the Chicago Elmas by a score of 9 to 6. The Lutheran Library association held a picnic at Tivoli garden.

The cornerstone of the new M. E. college building was laid yesterday under Masonic auspices. Grand Master Charles and Grand Secretary Smythe could not arrive in time for the ceremony, and the duty was delegated to Col. Sam B. Sweet and H. W.

Mordhurst. Rev. A. Marine, of Indianapolis, delivered the address of the day. The procession moved to the M. E. college grounds in the following order: Police force. Colored band. City officials in carriages. Uniform Degree Camp, No. 2, I. O. O. F.; Summit City Encampment, No. 16, I. O. O. F.; Fort Wayne Encampment, No. 162, I. O. O. F.; Harmony lodge, No. 19, I. O. O. Brown, acting W. M. The grand marshal was M. W. J. J. Todd, of Bluffton, and the assistant was Capt. Allan H. Dougall.

COL. FOSTER HELD PLOW.

Ground is Broken for New Knitting Mills Building.

Ground was broken Friday for the first building to be erected for the Old Fort Knitting mills at Walton avenue and the Nickel Plate railroad tracks, and Col. D. N. Foster was at the handles of the plow which turned the first furrow of earth for the excavation.

Col. Foster's last previous experience as a plowman occurred in his boyhood days half a century ago, but he came out of the present ceremony with flying colors.

GOVERNOR WAS IN TOWN.

With Mrs. Marshall He is Spending Fourth in Steuben County.

Governor and Mrs. T. R. Marshall arrived in the city last Saturday evening from Indianapolis, and were guests at the Anthony. Early Sunday morning the Indiana executive and his wife left for the lakes in Steuben county, where they are spending the Fourth the guests of Mrs. Marshall's parents.

The Duffer.
Nine little golf holes; boggy thirty-three.
Duffer badly tops his ball driving from the tee.

Eight little golf holes—first one cost eleven—
Buried in a bunker deep. Now there are seven.

Seven little golf holes. What an awful fix!
Three balls swimming in the brook. Now there are six.

Six little golf holes. When he tried to drive,
Sliced into the high grass. Now there are five.

Five little golf holes. Gracious, how he swore
As he dug the turf up! Now there are four.

Four little golf holes. Stymied by a tree,
Ball stuck in the branches. Now there are three.

Three little golf holes. Sphere just fairly flew.
But he missed a six inch putt. Now there are two.

Two little golf holes. In his face the sun;
Approaching, overran the green. Now there is one.

One little golf hole. Down a steep incline,
Driver's broken; ball is lost. Score is ninety-nine.

How Money Is Wasted On 5-Cent Cans

When you get the right brand of Evaporated Milk, you are wasting one-third if you buy in 5-cent cans. Please read these facts and see.

Let us say at the start that every grocer has 5-cent cans of Van Camp's. They are just as large as the 5-cent cans of vastly inferior brands. And we sell more than of the 10-cent cans, because of mistaken ideas. So, we don't give these facts to attack competition. They are simply to show how to get the most for your money.

Six Ounces for 5 Cents

All makers give six ounces of Evaporated Milk for five cents.

It matters not how much the milk is reduced by evaporation. It may be reduced as much as Van Camp's, or only partly as much.

All charge five-cents for six ounces. So you get just as much of Van Camp's for five cents as you get of the poorest brands on the market.

But you get but six ounces of any.

Sixteen Ounces, 10 Cents

In the 10-cent can of Van Camp's—the tall size—you get sixteen ounces of evaporated milk.

That means an even pint.

It means exactly one-third more for the money than you get in the 5-cent cans.

In Van Camp's you get 8 per cent of butter fat, about 28 per cent total solids. That is because we use rich, Holstein milk. And because we evaporate by far the larger part of the water.

If you put back the water which we take out, you get about three pints of very rich milk out of a 10-cent can.

And that rich milk will cost you, if you buy Van Camp's by the case, just about six cents per quart.

That's what you ought to pay.

But the same milk in 5-cent cans—even when bought by the case—costs you over eight cents per quart.

The Mistake Lies Here

You who buy 5-cent cans don't get the full good of Van Camp's.

You use it for coffee and cereals, perhaps. But you probably use raw milk in your cooking.

That is a great mistake.

Van Camp's is fully twice better for cooking than the average run of raw milk.

Raw milk always separates, for the butter fat rises and the solids fall. So raw milk used in cooking is rarely whole milk.

In Van Camp's you get the whole milk—all of the butter fat and all of the solids belonging to the richest milk.

If you will try Van Camp's in only one milk dish you will never use any other. Note the flavor, the richness you get from it.

Van Camp's is fine on the table, of course. But it is also fine in the kitchen. It has twice the worth of raw milk.

Another Mistake

Then some people think that evaporated milk doesn't keep when the can is opened.

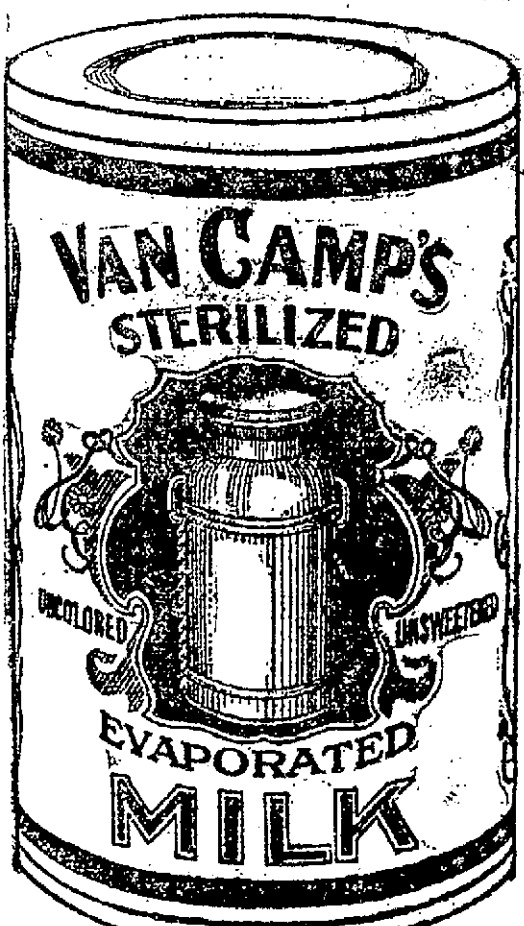

It will keep if you get Van Camp's. In usual weather it keeps 24 hours and it keeps 48 hours or longer on ice.

Keep it in the can until you use it up, for the can won't hurt it any.

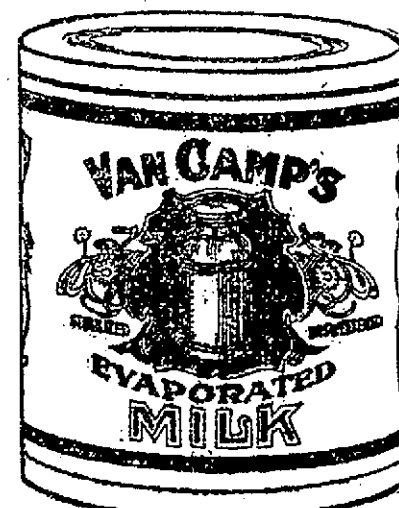

In the long run, what is best for you is also best for us. That's why we publish these facts.

Get the most for your money. Buy the pint cans—the 10-cent cans. Then ask your grocer to quote you his discount by the case.

You save money by buying 48 cans at a time. And you save all of the trouble of buying from hand to mouth.

A NEW LINE OF TALK.

Unexpected Experience of a Drummer
in a Car With a Pretty Girl.

"Is this seat engaged?" he asked of the prettiest girl in the car, and, finding that it wasn't, he put his sample box in the rack and braced himself for solid enjoyment.

"Pleasant day," said the girl, coming for him before he could get his tongue unlinked. "Most bewildering day, isn't it?"

"Oh, yes; thanks," murmured the drummer.

"Glad of it," resumed the girl cheerfully. "You don't look so. Let me put my shawl under your head, won't you? Hadn't you better sit next to the window and let me describe the landscape to you?"

"No, please," he murmured. "I am doing well enough."

"May I buy you some peanuts or a book? Let me do something to make the trip happy. Suppose I slip an arm around your waist. Just lean forward a trifle, please, so that I can."

"You'll—you'll have to excuse me," gasped the wretched drummer. "I don't think you really mean it."

"You look so tired," she pleaded. "Wouldn't you like to rest your head on my shoulder? No one will notice. Just lay your head right down and I'll tell you stories."

"No, thanks; I won't today. I am very comfortable," and the poor drummer looked around helplessly.

"Your scarfpin is coming out. Let me fix it! There," she said, and it came out. "At the next station I'll get you a cup of tea, and when we arrive at our destination you'll let me call on you?" And she smiled benevolently right into his pallid countenance.

"I think I'll go and smoke," said the drummer as he nudged down his grip sack and made a bolt for the door—Puck.

Quite Polite.

They were slight acquaintances, and there was no love lost between them.

"Well," said the first grande dame, "by by. I must really be getting on. I have to make a call on my mother."

The second put up her lorgnette and drawled:

"Really—ah—you don't mean to say you have a mother living?"

The first grande dame laughed—a high, thin laugh, with something biting, like acid, in it.

"Oh, yes," she retorted on the one who had tried to take her down. "My mother is still alive, and she doesn't look a day older than you do, I assure you."—Sphère.

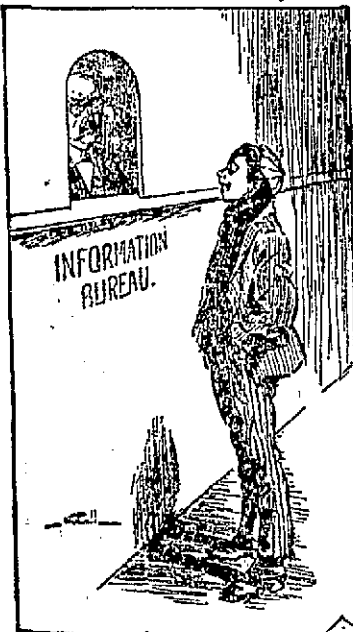

It Would Not Show.

That everything should be neat and shipshape is most important aboard a yacht. A writer in the Mariner's Advocate tells the story of the captain of a certain sloop who crossed the deck in a hurry, seemingly very much perplexed. A lady stopped him and asked what the trouble was.

"The fact is, ma'am," he said, "our rudder's broken."

"Oh, I shouldn't worry about that," said the lady. "Being under water nearly all the time, no one will notice it."

Not Particular.

Small Boy—What do you know?—Woman's Home Companion.

Her Blue Kitchen.

"You are always talking about your lovely little blue kitchen," they said, "but we see you dining out every night. Do you ever cook in it?"

"Not enough to get tired of it," she said, "and that's the reason I like it so."—New York Press.

Force of Habit.

"The new singer in the choir pitches all his music so high."

Complaint of the Convalescent. When you're sick in bed of something and hate the sight of food.

When the tinkle of a teaspoon is torture to your mood.

Nurse will come to you at intervals. That haven't any length.

And it's, "Eat this all now quickly. For you must keep up your strength."

But when you're really better and your appetite is fine.

When your chief and only longing is substantially to dine.

Nurse will bring you something stoppy after ages, ages long.

And it's, "Just a little slowly. For you know you are not strong."

Oh, it may be she's an angel—I have thought she was myself. But now I am so hungry!

Is there nothing on the shelf? I want some cheese and crackers Or a slice of cold mince pie.

And it's, "You may have some jelly. Lemon jelly, by and by."

THE DISPOSSESSED HEART.

FAIR Mabel had a dainty waist.

A triumph of the fashion's art; But, ah, so tightly was it laced There wasn't room for Mabel's heart!

The hapless heart was in despair. "I must beat somewhere! I believe I've heard a pretty girl will wear Her heart sometimes upon her sleeve."

But Mabel's sleeve clung like a skin To Mabel's softly rounded arm. The beating heart could not squeeze in. It looked about in vague alarm.

"Well, well, I must try other routes! Of timid maids I've heard it said. Often their hearts are in their boots." And downward then it quickly sped.

"Ah, this place," said the heart, "I choose!" Alas, it found no room to beat—The little patent leather shoes So snugly fitted Mabel's feet.

Now, though deep fear the poor heart smote. It thought: "Sometimes a girl—'t is said Because her heart is in her shoe I do believe that's just the t—"

To Mabel's lovely throat it sto But once again—poor, luckless wight—it failed to reach its longed-for goal—Her collar was so high and tight.

The desperate heart, despairing, sighed: "There's no place left but Mabel's hat. Ah! I'm saved!" with joy, it cried. For there was lots of room on that!

The Kind.

"I want some cigars for my husband, please."

"Yes, madam. What kind?"

"I don't quite know, but he's a small man and always dresses in black!"

Billy's Predicament.

Sister Bessie came running home from the church bazaar in breathless excitement.

"Oh, mamma," she panted, "Billy met with an accident down at the bazaar."

"Dear me!" sighed the mother.

"What mischief is he in now? I declare he's a bitter pill."

"Oh, but he won't be so bitter now. He's sugar coated. He just fell into the tub of soft molasses taffy."—St. Louis Republic.

Awakened Sympathy.

"When the balmy zephyrs come stealing o'er the scene," said the young man with feathery hair, "doesn't it make you feel kinder toward human nature to dream of being on the moon-lit lake with your light guitar wailing the echoes with song?"

"It does," answered Mr. Sirius Barker. "It makes me feel kinder than I did before toward the fellow that rocks the boat."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Here Is the Chance of Your Lifetime

Now for Furniture and Carpet Bargains

A Magnificent Stock to be Sacrificed

Mr. S. J. Payne, of Wabash, Ind., has been known for a generation as the Leading Furniture Dealer of that pretty and wealthy city. He has handled only the highest grades of Furniture and Carpets, and has catered to the Fine Trade of his community. He recently became financially embarrassed, and his Magnificent Stock of Fine and Up-to-Date Furniture, bought for this season's trade, passed into the hands of the court and was ordered to be sold in bulk to the highest bidder. We attended the sale. The size of the stock was so great that but few stores could handle it, enabling us to purchase it at a fearful sacrifice.

This Beautiful Stock of Goods Cost Over $20,000 But We Bought It for Less Than Half That Amount

And now the customers of the "Big Store" are going to be given the benefit. The residents of Wabash fairly pleaded with us to let them have the opportunity to buy these goods, but we declined to sell them out in that city, and told them that they had been purchased for the benefit of our regular trade and they would be shipped to our Fort Wayne and Lafayette stores.

This Stock of Furniture and Carpets is now to be disposed of at prices that will create the greatest trade sensation this city has known for many years.

This great sale of the Payne Stock will commence Wednesday, July 7. Our store will be closed all day Monday and Tuesday, July 5 and 6, in order to make arrangements for the Great Opening.

All the articles from the Payne stock will be sold for just about half price, as will be such pieces of our own stock as are not to be duplicated for the coming season. Many other goods, most of which have just come in for our Fall Trade, will be discounted 20 to 25 per cent.

All goods will be ticketed in plain figures, giving the regular price and then the selling price, so that you can almost wait upon yourself and will be able to see just how much you can save.

The prices marked will be for net cash at time of purchase, but in order that our time customers may also have the benefit of this great sale, we will arrange with them special terms at a slight percentage added for credit, but still leaving the goods much below ordinary prices.

Here will certainly be the opportunity of your lifetime for buying a Housekeeping Outfit, or for adding additional pieces to the outfit you already have.

In order to accommodate those having monthly pay days, we will count as paid for in cash any good upon which a small payment is made and the goods laid away and the balance upon them paid before August 1.

This sale will continue all through this month of July but it is well to remember that early buyers will be enabled to make their selections from the fullest assortment.

THE STORY OF A SOCIETY GIRL

IN WHICH THE BARON USES A COVERT THREAT IN RESENTING THE DENIAL OF THE MARRIAGE ENGAGEMENT

TOLD TO RITA WEIMAN.

Copyright, 1920, by the New York Herald Co. All Rights Reserved.

"No, really, it's not true. Some ridiculous mistake or ambitious reporter—I'm trying to discover just which—must be responsible. I can't commence to tell you how I regret the whole absurd affair." I looked up with a smile—it must have been a tired one—into the face of Evelyn Taghern-Steward.

For the fiftieth time—or more—I was trying to annihilate that terrible announcement of a few days before. It was my mother's "day" and I seemed to be dispensing denials with the tea. From the moment, in fact, of my precipitate visit to the first newspaper and my interview there with Miss Cavanaugh, through the long hours of telephone calls, visitors and curious inquiry, I seemed to have become an animated "No."

The newspapers had softened somewhat my first emphatic contradiction in deference to the interview my mother had granted to an army of reporters during my own round of visits in the newspaper world. She had neither confirmed nor denied the "authoritative statement" of my engagement to Baron de Berensz, but suggested "possibilities" which she left to the reportorial imagination. In consequence there was for several days such a medley of information, both pro and con, as served merely to whet curiosity and keep me uncomfortably in the public eye.

"I want to know the meaning of this," The day the announcement made its appearance my father had come into the drawing room where I awaited our dinner guests. He held two evening newspapers and frowningly indicated a paragraph in each, one flaunting under my picture the news of my coming marriage to a Hungarian nobleman, the other denying that such a marriage was to take place. "Why this abominable notoriety?" My father took the time to look straight at me, fiery disapproval in his eyes.

I had steeled myself to meet a flood of questions—the world's demands—with the scant information that the notice was an unfortunate mistake. But my father and brother I intended should know the truth. I met the gaze bent upon me with a look to match his own.

"If my mother insists upon placing me in an abominable position my family must expect to be dragged into it with me. She knows more than I can tell you of that outrageous announcement." I sent the words darting to meet my mother, who had just entered. "As for the denial of it—I had no alternative. Look upon it, if you choose, as a declaration of independence." And I swept out, afraid to trust myself further.

I never knew what the interview that must have followed brought forth; but in the face of my open rebellion, which she undoubtedly had not anticipated, my mother could do nothing for a time but suggest with a shrug that all inquiry be addressed to me.

The Baron Appears.

And now, three days later, I smiled straight at the two touches of mauve on Evelyn's cheeks—a fad she had decided to perpetuate since its success at the Ham Warrens' dance—and then let my eyes wander to the sceptical curve of her intensely red lips, as I repeated my weary avowal that I was not engaged and didn't expect to be. The group about the tea table listened with an air of expectancy. "It's tremendously exciting, of course," I added, with an up-arch of the eyebrows indicating that it wasn't. "It's having all the fun without any of the responsibility; and then, think what valuable experience it's going to prove some day!" I stopped with the teapot raised above a gold cup fine as an eggshell. "Isn't it, Baron?" I supplemented drolly as I saw him coming toward me, and I flattered myself my hand did not even tremble—that much I had advanced in a year.

I had known, of course, the man was too insolent to acknowledge defeat by staying away, and so I was prepared for his appearance at any time. He advanced now to meet my question. "That which the fair lady says is true, of a necessity," he said with exquisite grace, "though I must admit I have not yet heard what it was."

"I was saying," I pushed on headlong, the teapot still held aloft, as I felt the room, Argus-eyed, concentrating its gaze upon us—it was the first time we had met since the violent upheaval of three days before—"I was telling our friends here how immensely we are enjoying the little joke perpetrated at our expense a few days ago." The words were scarcely uttered than I regretted the recklessness of them.

The Baron leaned over my chair. "In my country we do not rejoice when news is published—prematurely!" Though spoken with apparent lightness, the word was thrust at me like a sword point.

My wrist of a sudden grew limp, my hand descended weakly, there was a crack, and the eggshell gold cup yawped up at me in a wide grin. Those about the table coughed, there was a stir of surprised interest, followed by a sudden buzz of conversation. I wanted to shriek, to shout that I was a little idiot for playing directly into the enemy's hands. Instead I tried to fall back easily on my defences. "Is that because, being premature, it's apt to kill the very end it seeks to accomplish?"

Carley Is Mentioned.

"In this country, it would seem," observed the Baron pointedly, "an affair is but sooner accomplished when it is hurried."

I held the sugar tongs poised steadily above another cup, just to prove that my discomfort had been but momentary. "How fortunate," I retorted, "that our case is an interesting exception to the rule! Shall it be lemon or cream, Baron?" And I had the satisfaction of seeing Perry Willing—whose propensity for scandal I feared more than any woman's—smile appreciatively.

When a week later I read in the magazine of town talk an account of that scene in its entirety I no longer doubted the newspaper man's startling statement that there was a corps of secret service workers gathering inside information in our very midst.

"If mamma is so very anxious and the Herr Baron so very willing, why is our dark-eyed, gypsy-haired maiden so thoroughly disturbed that she breaks china worth a king's ransom in her embarrassment? If it's notoriety she's seeking, she has certainly proved her ability in the line of self-advertisement this winter. Some of our theatrical stars, not to mention lady authors, might well take lessons from her and save themselves the expense of a press agent. But we're suspicious there's an underlying motive—perhaps it's Carley Deane—lucky boy!"

Advertisement! Underlying motive! When all I wanted was peace and the privilege of being myself! I flung the thing from me and myself into a chair before the dressing table, my face buried in my hands. Poor Carley! I had dragged him into the beastly affair, too, and already I was beginning to fear the consequences. Carley was such a boy; I had thought him the safest, and now who knew how much unhappiness my rash impulse was going to cause him! Everything seemed to be going wrong—even the early morning face that stared back at me as I looked up into the mirror. There were little seamy lines at the corners of the eyes, and the rings about them were heavy enough to set with jewels. My rose chiffon negligee made my third girl's throat look dead and lifeless as it felt—like an old woman's—and my pale lips seemed anything but inviting. Alto-

I scribbled a line, saying that a little before twelve would suit me admirably, and hurried into a walking suit, only to come face to face with Jason Miles on my way out. "Hello, my dear!" She held out both hands. "I'm just running in to tell you how perfectly thrilling I think it all is. Why, you're the most envied girl in Gotham. There isn't a married woman, even, wouldn't give her ears to be talked about the way you've been for days and days! I've just left Cissy Trane sitting up in bed fairly devouring that paragraph about you this morning, and I can tell you her eyes were a brilliant pea green. That girl will have every man in town after her now," she said; "she's simply made herself interesting—I never thought she had it in her!" And I sat down on her right then and there with, "You don't mean to say you're just commencing to discover how clever Gypsy is?" Why, my dear," Jason bubbled over, "People are forgetting to ask how long Mr. Evelyn Taghern-Stew is going to stand for his wife's escapades and whether Evelyn is really going to succeed in separating the Johnny van Tiels. They've stopped wonder-

First you calmly appropriate a prize package from a lot of women who had claimed him for their own, and now, a year and a half later, you show an even calmer inclination to make him ridiculous—as if he weren't all he'd been represented."

I gave a gasping little laugh. If she'd known how the "prize package" had misrepresented himself, and how near he'd come to making me ridiculous!

"Oh, yes, it is fun, I'll admit," Jason joined in. "But it's meant only for those safely married, and they know it. We're modest virolets, you know, and they are going to resent our breaking away from their patronage, my dear. So don't keep this up too long, even though it is the most deliciously exciting thing that's ever going to happen to you."

"Well," I stretched my arms above my head with an attempt at carelessness. It was useless, I knew, to try to convince her how wretched I felt about it all.

"I've no desire to usurp their privileges, I assure you, and all this notoriety is as unsought as it is uncomfortable." I wondered whether she could have noticed the lines about my eyes and guessed that each one indicated a sleepless night. "You wouldn't have had me drag the Baron into an unpleasant position by failing to deny the engagement, would you?"

Jason looked at me with a complimentary gleam in her eye. "Every one says it's a position he'd take at a moment's notice. And, my dear, he is such a fascinator! Why, his eyes could make me!" She rose with a flutter of frills as I stifled a yawn and gave me a little puzzled glance from the corner of her eye. "But of course," she shrugged, "you know best what you're doing."

"I don't," I laughed; "that's just it. Every one else seems to know so much better than I'm being credited with motives I've not brains enough to think of. Some day I shall slip quite naturally into oblivion and people will begin to realize how they've fooled themselves."

"And meanwhile you'll keep on being a celebrity and having the most glorious time of your life!" she effervesced. "Yes, you can take me down, dear," as I interrupted to ask if I could drop her somewhere; "our car is out of commission"—the Miles car was always nominally in evidence, but materially out of commission—I've promised to stop back for Cissy."

The Papers in the Case.

"Hardly!" Jason gave a flattering little laugh as we stopped a few blocks further on. "You're far too clever, Gypsy," she added, stepping out, "for any of us." But I knew and she knew that I wasn't.

I arrived late to meet my mysterious appointment with Robert Stead, and as I entered the offices found Dick hurrying out.

"Hello, little girl!" He stopped, turning back with me. "Coming in to tell me some more of your troubles?"

"Not this time, though they're heavy enough, Dick."

"Still that miserable announcement?" He frowned.

"Four kiddie, having greatness thrust upon her that way! Live it down!"—he looked at me with that dear brother's smile of tenderness I loved as the only family tie I had ever been made to feel—"like the rest of us," he added, tilting my chin so that I met his gaze. "But if you're not here to see me, why?"

"I've an appointment."

"Aha!" Dick's eyes smiled into mine. "Sly Bob!"

"Why, no?" I felt myself flush unexpectedly and hurried on. "He sent me a note this morning."

"Exactly!" I said. "Sly Bob!" Then his brows came together. "Don't let him tell you all my shortcomings, Gypsy," he laughed, with an underlying note of seriousness.

"Your shortcomings, Dick?"

"Well," he hesitated, watching me a little anxiously, "they've offered him a neat little judgeship, and he may want some advance practice before he's elding to accept." He finished ominatically, and I knew that wasn't what he had started out to say. "You'll notice I'm not asking the nature of that appointment," he went on lightly, as he turned to go, "but I always did say Bob knew the real article the minute he laid eyes on it."

"Dick," I called after him, "you're positively vulgar!"

A moment later I was shaking hands with Robert Stead and telling him I'd come in dread of his peremptory legal summons. "Please don't tell me you're sitting in judgment on me along with the rest of the world," I pleaded.

"Oh, as to that," he drew forward a chair and sat down facing me, his dark eye snapping—"I've examined all the papers in the case, as advised."

"Newspapers, you mean," I corrected.

"Why are there any others—an incriminating correspondence, or?"

"I couldn't help laughing at his assumption of concern."

"Well, then," he went on, "having examined all the papers in the case, I am prepared to declare myself for the plaintiff—and the rest of the world can take care of itself! I do want to tell you," he leaned toward me, his voice lost its railery and a look of genuine disgust darkened his face—"that I think it the most contemptible piece of business!"

Dolly Brooke Again.

"I am glad I warned you in advance," I interrupted earnestly, wondering whether he could really have surmised that the announcement had not been due solely to an overzealous reporter. His words and manner certainly indicated that he suspected wheels within wheels. "And now your note of this morning."

"I hastened to change the subject, feeling an absurd inclination to confess to him more than I should. As long as you've relieved me of any possible fears for myself."

"Ah, yes," he pulled his chair closer to me; then, tossing up his head like a thoroughbred taking the bit between his teeth, "I'm going to make a singular request," he said in a quick, hurried voice, "one you will probably misinterpret. I want—an opportunity—to meet Mrs. Brooke again soon—very soon."

"Not at all extraordinary!" Though I was puzzled that he had brought me down to his office for so strange a purpose. "More than one man, having met Mrs. Dolly once, is anxious to see her again. Is that the matter of importance?" I couldn't prevent an unpleasant note of amused surprise from creeping into my voice. The man had seemed far too big to waste his time worrying over a pretty woman.

"Don't misunderstand. It is the most important to you than to me," he stopped himself suddenly—"I can't even attempt to explain," he continued, his fingers drumming a little nervously on the table at his side—"I was the first time I had seen a sign of indecision on his part; 'but I need you to help me."

I FLUNG MYSELF INTO A CHAIR  MY FACE BURIED IN MY HANDS.

gether it was a sorry spectacle that met my gaze. I wondered why the Baron persisted; there were plenty of other girls, beautiful debutantes even, with as much money as I. As for Carley—well, he probably was dazzled by his role of cavalier and anxious to find it becomingly even if it precipitated him to the point of proposal!

I raised my arms high above my head and brought them down, hands clasped, upon it. Not yet four years, and this was what it had done for me! How I hated it all! If only I could get away—find a new world, a different one! I let my hands drop idly, and one of them fell on a cigarette case, gold, with Nella's monogram in diamonds. She had forgotten it the day before, and it still lay on the dressing table. I took out a cigarette, dainty, gold tipped, and it sent forth a subtle, soothing aroma. Slowly I raised it until it touched my lips; they caressed it longingly, unaccustomed though they were to the smoking habit. A moment my fingers held it, then reached for a match. But they halted half way, and the cigarette was dropped hastily at a providential knock on the door.

Jason Miles Drops In.

My maid handed me the tray she had taken from the butler, and I picked up a letter, looking at it curiously, forgetting in my surprise the temptation of a moment before. The name in one corner of the envelope was that of Dick's firm, but the writing was not my brother's. I studied the strong, abrupt hand, feeling an exhilarating flush of interest.

"There's a messenger waiting for the answer," A paper knife was thrust into my hand as a reminder. My maid was new and apparently deeply concerned over my affairs. I hesitated long enough to be sure she was not looking over my shoulder, then inserted the knife. To my astonishment, the envelope yielded only a request to call at the office as near noon as possible that day to consult on a matter of importance. That was all—just enough to arouse my curiosity—above the signature of Robert Stead, with an added word asking me to name the hour, if any, convenient for me.

ing how far Mrs. Hal will go to break into society, and if that stunning Mrs. Stannard's affair with Archie Wynne will land her there. They've given up asking questions, sub rosa, about Mrs. Dolly's antecedents and how our exclusive Nella came to take her up without knowing more of them. And as for Nella herself, and whether she's going to give Billy his final congé in favor of that fascinating brother of yours—my dear, it's all, all forgotten! Everything's gone—you—YOU! Whew!"

Jason subsided to take a long breath.

"Well," I turned about and made for the library. "I've just five minutes," I managed to interpose, flinging myself into a chair, as Jason snuggled into a copious one facing me, her long train dragging like a peacock's tail along the floor. "To tell you that I'd give five years of this precious life to be able to 'wrap the drapery of my couch about me' and forget about the whole affair. It's developed into the most unamusing experience of my existence, however entertaining the rest of the world may find it. How do you think you'd enjoy being promised in marriage off-hand by a disinterested newspaper, and to the wrong man at that?"

"Oh," Jason sat up; "then there is a right one?"

"Let's hope there will be some day. Otherwise all this fuss might be futile."

One Idea of a Prize.

"Carley?" Jason's eyes twinkled knowingly and every hair of her gold head shone with interest.

"Oh, no one just at present," I shrugged; "just an indefinite ideal I'll probably never come upon."

"Oh, come now; don't try to put me off!" Jason looked incredulous. "You know, my dear, it's bound to be either Carley or the Baron—unless something better turns up unexpectedly."

"Well, if what Cissy Trane says is true I ought to have dozens, both attached and unattached, to choose from within a very short time. I'll have to live up to what's expected of me."

"You won't be popular if you do," she giggled. "You've roused jealousy enough already, my dear."

and if it can be arranged." His quick eyes met mine squarely and there was just a momentary suggestion of appeal in them.

"Of course it can!" I came in promptly. "Dick shall give us another of those delightful luncheon parties. It will be the best kind of an excuse!"

He rose hastily and walked to the other end of the room, so that his face was turned from me, but I could feel the tense energy of his angular frame, with its broad, square shoulders. "Suppose we keep this matter entirely between ourselves. I know it seems unusual—he veered about, facing me—"unprecedented even, asking you to trust me—to do this for me, a complete stranger, without even consulting your brother?"

I looked up at him in bewilderment. Dick was his associate, comrade, friend. What was it I could do for him apart from Dick's knowledge that my brother could not accomplish a thousand times better? "But Dick?"—I began.

He brought his hand vehemently down on the table before him. "Dick is white—white clean through—and he's not going to be tricked by any one—you or I least of all." He broke off, his eyes gleaming. I wished that I might have seen him pleading a case in court. "How about that portrait you were going to let me see? Is it beautiful enough?" And his sudden smile was a challenge.

I caught up the implied suggestion. "Yes, it might be arranged that way." I considered a moment. "Monsieur Gerard has promised me a private view for my friends before he sends it to the Academy. I could make it Saturday afternoon, at about five."

Robert Stead held out his hand. "I'm glad you're willing to number me among them. And try—he looked down at me as I met his clasp, to think me as welcome—as you can, under the circumstances."

I smiled at his earnestness. "You men of law are mysterious. Is it the law?"

"No," he said, "it's life!"

I looked forward with some trepidation to the occasion of my select little party at Gerard's studio. I couldn't help wondering how Robert Stead would be accepted. Would he be looked upon as an interloper, or as a mere curiosity that I had by some chance recently unearthed?

In the Studio.

The warm Oriental touch that Jean Gerard loved to give to his pictures found extravagant expression in the heavy Moorish lamps and braziers that sent their subtle glow through the reception room adjoining his big underground studio. I enjoyed comparing the two, one so indicative of the artist at his leisure, the other of the workman. Gerard met us that Saturday, Nella and Dolly and I, in the outer room, and I smiled absently on the rest of the party as they sauntered in, my gaze wandering unceasingly every now and then to the door. I felt like a conspirator.

My principal guest came among the last and I could feel at once the unexpected ripple of interest his entrance set in motion. Evelyn Taghern-Steward swept up her long, slender, forgetting her usual languid grace, and my imagination conjured up a dash of pink under the mauve spots on her cheeks. The Grace girls tilted their chins in laudatory inquiry and slurred when Lord Burningham leaned toward them with a whispered question. Perry Willing gave Mrs. Algy Trane a delicate nudge and she bent her length forward, as the newcomer came toward her, with an eagerness she could not conceal. Fritzzy Migelow galloped himself up from his sprawling position next to Jason in a Turkish corner. And Carley acknowledged his introduction in dazed fashion, wondering probably if this was some new trick I was trying. Altogether, there was a stimulating tingle of electricity in the air.

But if I expected Robert Stead to utilize Mrs. Dolly's instant recollection of him as a means to monopolize her I was quite mistaken. Once in the studio, he engaged with Gerard in a discussion of my portrait, displaying a knowledge of art that must have astonished the artist as much as it did me. He seemed to have forgotten all of us, and gradually the little murmurs of admiration, or comment, or stereotyped criticism died away. We found ourselves listening to the low, vibrant tones of his voice as he lit upon points of construction, resemblance, and drapery, that pierced the suave French painter's cultivated veneer and sent him dancing with the primitive joy of the creator.

"My dear," Jason whispered into my ear, "he's a stunner. Where did you find him?"

"Oh," I laughed, "he's just part of the big world and I know nothing about it. I dare say you could run across him anywhere in the neighborhood where the wheels go round."

Gerard was humming up a sketch of the President of France, and Robert Stead came toward us. "Monsieur Gerard says you object to the use of your name on the portrait. Why not call it 'Truth'? Those are the frankest eyes I've ever seen." And he looked straight into mine.

I looked from him to the portrait—a transparent cloud of white tulle, and rising from it a black-haired girl, who might have been myself, as I hoped to be. "Because," I responded, "you can't count on seeing truth in black and white." And there was a little titter of understanding from those near enough to hear.

The Portrait.

But as my eyes came back to him I saw that Robert Stead was staring at a small canvas the artist had pushed to one side. "Why," he turned in the direction of Dolly—herself a picture in violet and gray—whose eyes were unconsciously following him. "Isn't this Mrs. Brooke?" He picked up the sketch of bright eyes and gauzy green that Gerard had shown me weeks before.

"Why, so it is!" Dolly took the canvas from him a little hurriedly. "Monsieur Gerard, when did you get this?" She examined the painting carefully and turned to Gerard, her musical voice strangely discordant. "Don't you know, I've made it a point never to pose—for any one?"

"Madame," the Frenchman bowed to the ground, "when every unconscious pose is in itself a picture, what artist would wish to resist—or forget?"

Dolly looked up at him with an enchanting smile. "It is a dear picture," she admitted, then moving closer to the artist and in a monotone that did not escape me, nor Robert Stead, whose gaze I could feel going out to her in little waves of magnetism, "is it possible for me to possess it?" she asked.

The Frenchman flung out his hands despairingly. "I regret, Madame, it is not to be had, unless—you will consent to permit me to paint another, and better one of you."

Dolly grasped the picture in both hands. "Per-haps," she compromised.

"When Madame has been so gracious as to consent, and the picture has been completed," the artist answered, unwavering, "she shall have this one as an acknowledgment." He twisted his mustache, his eyes implacably alert for her reply.

Dolly bit her lip and moved away, the sketch still grasped in her hands. Robert Stead's keen glance followed her above the drawing he made a faint at examining. She went toward the reception room, with its mingling of warm light and shade, and as the rest of us joined her there was a sudden sharp outcry, the sketch fell, face downward on a divan, and Dolly's hand went up to her lips, a ragged tear across her gray glove. "I've collided with one of those fascinating Egyptian things of yours, monsieur l'artiste," she pointed to a standing brazier, "and I'm afraid I've done myself harm." She tipped off her glove, displaying to the surrounding group a crimson welt slashing her white hand. Our host, uttering a thousand apologies, hurried off for some lotion.

But Robert Stead had quietly taken up the picture she had flung aside and I saw across its painted surface a merciless, irreparable gash.

THE SHOP AND RAILROAD NEWS

HEAVIEST IN HISTORY WAS TRAVEL ON THE FOURTH

Lake Shore and G. R. & I. Took 2,700 People to the Lakes.

The heaviest in the history of Fourth of July railroad business was the travel out of Fort Wayne yesterday. By far the greater portion of the passengers were bound for the lakes, but the travel to stations along the various lines was also heavy. Incoming travel was light, however. The Lake Shore took between 1,400 and 1,500 people to the lakes Saturday and Sunday and the Lake Erie and Western had seventy-five passengers for Indianapolis out of this city yesterday morning. The latter travel was a disappointment to the railway people, as they expected double the number of passengers. All trains on the Nickel Plate were loaded to the capacity of their cars Saturday and Sunday and the 8:05 train Saturday night, which has two coaches ordinarily, had six and all were filled. Nos. 1 and 3 each had three extra coaches, all filled to the full seating capacity. The Wabash took 265 to Toledo and 46 to Detroit out of this city yesterday morning. In addition to handling hundreds of others in and out of Fort Wayne on Fourth of July, Saturday and Sunday, Agent W. H. Shorey says the business was far greater than the business of a year ago. The Pennsylvania locals were also loaded, especially the local or accommodation trains, and all had to have extra equipment and some were run in two sections. On this line the incoming business was equal to the outgoing. The Grand Rapids and Indiana had the greatest Rome City business of the season and did a heavy business in the sale of Fourth of July tickets to and from all the other stations. Saturday night, in addition to the big number of commuter tickets used on the "pond fly" train, there were sold 150 tickets reading Rome City and return. Sunday morning the two trains took 948 more people to the resort and this morning 95 purchased tickets to Rome City and went there on the 8:50 o'clock train. Many of the Rome City and the Lake Shore resort passengers of Saturday night and Sunday morning remained at the lake to come home this evening and extra equipment will be furnished by the railways to handle them. It is estimated that the number of outgoing passengers on all lines approximated 4,000.

PLACED SOME STOCK TODAY.

Atlas Locomotive Ashpan Company Sells $10,000 Worth.

The Atlas Locomotive Ashpan company placed $10,000 worth of stock with Fort Wayne capital today, thus practically deciding the location of a factory for the manufacture of the ashpan. Saturday a deal was closed with the Chicago Terminal and the Chicago Junction companies to equip their engines with these pans. These roads have a good many engines and the deal with them is considered of great importance. T. P. Whelan, one of the members of the ashpan company, is in Detroit today and tomorrow he goes to St. Louis to close deals with railway companies.

Central foundry Saturday was not on account of differences about wages, as at first reported. As an economical measure the management has been having heats poured off every other day, instead of every day, against the will of the molders. When the request of the latter to have heats poured every day was refused, nine of the men walked out and were soon afterwards paid off. There was no disturbance and none is expected, as the men involved in the strike are quiet, law-abiding residents. Six helpers remained at work.

LOPS OFF 41 MINUTES.

Next Sunday, when the Nickel Plate will put a new time card into effect, it will show that train No. 6 will leave Chicago at 9:43 instead of 9:02, and go into Buffalo on the present schedule, stopping at forty-one minutes of the running time between terminals. Thirty-five minutes of this time is to be made up between Chicago and Cleveland, the train passing through this city at 2:20 a. m. instead of 2:05, as at present. There will be no other changes affecting the schedule of passenger trains through this city.

BOOKED ORDERS FOR STEEL.

The Fort Wayne Rolling Mills promises a busy time for its employees the balance of the year, orders received recently and inquiries concerning others indicating a big business. Among the recent orders was one from the Studebaker Wagon company, of South Bend, for all the steel used in the big vehicle plant for a number of months. Another order came from St. Louis. There are other big orders on the books and more will be placed there this week.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

The Genke Stone company, of Pearl street, will furnish all the dressed stone for the brick building to be erected in Huntington this summer.

John Brown, superintendent of waterworks of the Wabash, is suffering from a severe cold and has taken a lay off for treatment.

T. J. Welsh, of the Pennsylvania holler shop, and his family, went to Rome City this morning to occupy the Freilinger cottage for a week.

Delbert C. Davis, assistant treasurer of the General Electric company at Schenectady, N. Y., spent Sunday and the Fourth with his family in the city. Division No. 119, Order of Railway Conductors, held its monthly meeting yesterday afternoon, considering only routine business. During the summer months the division will meet only once a month, on the first Sunday.

Engineer Dayton Jennings, of the Pennsylvania, and Machinist Robert R. Shuman, of the Electric works, with their wives have returned from Clear Lake, where they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Vodermark ten days.

Leroy Hartzler, Nickel Plate dispatcher, entered upon his vacation today. Accompanied by Mrs. Hartzler and the children he will leave this afternoon for Los Angeles, Cal., where he will spend the greater portion of the time.

L. L. Gilbert, assistant counsel of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, with headquarters in that city, has resigned on account of failing health and E. L. Culbert has been appointed his successor. He will have charge of claims.

Wabash Engineer E. J. Gephart, of Peru, was here Saturday to see his son, who is at St. Joseph's hospital, having an eye treated. The optic was injured by being struck by a baseball several weeks ago. He will not lose the sight.

R. J. Hamilton, city passenger agent at Chicago for the Louisville and Nashville company, spent the Fourth in the city with relatives and friends. Mr. Hamilton was ticket and passenger agent at Fort Wayne for the Nickel Plate several years ago.

Agent Harry Pinniger, of the Lake Shore and the Lake Erie and Western, accompanied by Mrs. Pinniger, went to Toledo yesterday. Mr. Pinniger will return Wednesday noon, but Mrs. Pinniger will remain in Toledo several days to visit her parents.

Medical Examiner E. F. Wagner, of the Pennsylvania Voluntary Relief association, is at Youngstown, O., visiting friends. He will return home tomorrow afternoon. July 18 Dr. Wagner starts upon a four weeks' trip to Alaska. He will be the guest of a friend from New York, who goes into Alaska to look after some mining interests.

The Adams Express company handled a car load of wild animals consigned to the Proctor-Bulger-Franklin Amusement company Saturday. Among the animals were lions, bears, grey wolves, whitecats, a sacred cow, deers and a zebra and they will be used in connection with the show at Robison park.

Fred I. Felck, of Garrett, was in the city a short time Saturday. He had been in Indianapolis to confer with Governor Marshall on matters connected with the enforcement of some of the laws passed by the recent legislature. Mr. Felck is chairman of the legislative board of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and in that capacity spent the legislative season at the Hoosier capital.

GO TO WINONA LAKE

Northern Indiana News and Gossip

Wheat-cutting began in Kosciusko county Saturday.

Amzi E. Snell has been appointed a letter carrier at Logansport.

Lydia Gravitt, 63, was found dead in her bed at the Adams county infirmary.

Speth Bend's population is now 52,000, according to the estimate of the telephone company there.

A. W. Fatten, formerly of Bluffton, was killed in an explosion of nitroglycerine at Titusville, Pa., a few days ago.

Mrs. Margaret Morgan, 92 years of age, died Saturday at Warren. She was one of the oldest residents of Huntington county.

The home of George King, at Kingsland, was destroyed by fire Friday, presumably originating from a Lake Erie locomotive.

During sixty-eight days that comprised the April term of the Kosciusko circuit court at Warsaw, Judge Bowser disposed of 144 cases.

The residence of William Ackerman, six miles northeast of Kendallville, was struck by lightning Friday and burned to the ground.

Logansport and Lafayette folk are talking of a new interurban to join the two cities, passing through Knox, Bass Lake and Winamac.

Herbert Kennedy, 12, is dead at Muncie from lockjaw as the result of a wound in his hand from a blank cartridge fired by a playmate.

Emory Forest, of Bluffton, trying out his new automobile, met a cow which declined to get out of the road. The car was somewhat damaged in the collision.

Hamura Hauterierangi to Punga, a native of New Zealand, who is studying for the ministry, will spend the summer studying at the home of Rev. H. C. Jaus, at St. Johns, in Adams county.

Citizens of Churubusco are seeking an injunction to prevent the town board from proceeding with the construction of a sewer, alleging that the old sewer facilities are adequate.

Nine members of a Lafayette Fourth of July picnic party were injured Sunday evening when the big van bringing them back to the city went over a sixteen-foot embankment. John Deiter and his wife were not recovered.

Officers at Huntington made a "blind tiger" raid Saturday evening, arresting Charles Young, Arthur Brown and Charles Fusselman on charges of selling liquor illegally. A quantity of intoxicants found in the places was confiscated.

Delmer E. Kinney, the conductor whom Coroner Carson charged with responsibility for the trolley wreck near South Bend, June 19, when a dozen persons lost life, has mysteriously disappeared. He left the hospital at South Bend presumably for a few hours, but did not return.

Incorporated: South Bend Vacuum Ice company, South Bend, Ind.; the manufacture and sale of ice at wholesale and retail; capital, $75,000; directors, William H. Hupp, Stephen A. Knablock, Charles M. Kreighbaum, Philip E. Boudurant, Laban T. Lear, Albert R. Wickizer and Clinton A. Bondurant.

Michael Steinman, a Wabash county farmer, did not know his house was afire until he heard his telephone, which is on a "party line," ringing successively every other call but his own. Then Mr. Steinman went to the phone and heard a neighboring farmer: "Hurry to Steinman's house; it is burning." The loss was $1,500.

Health Officer Foltz, of Elkhart, says he is having endless trouble in enforcing the health laws there and he threatens to appeal to the state board and have an inspector sent to Elkhart. Mr. Foltz says whenever he makes an arrest, somebody sees that the complaint is dismissed. He is determined to make Elkhartians live up to the law.

Ray Routsong, 20 years of age, who was sleeping in a livery stable at Goshen, was burned to death Saturday evening after a skyrocket went through an open window in the barn and started a fire which destroyed the building. Others who slept in the building escaped, and it was not known that Routsong was in the building until firemen stumbled over his charred body.

The order of the Indiana railroad commission issued at the request of residents of Auburn, Garrett, Cedarville, Churubusco and other points, that all Vandalla trains stop at the T. & C. I. crossing south of Garrett, has become effective and all the Vandalla trains stop there now. The order was requested as many passengers desire to make connections with Vandalla trains from the traction lines, and if it is found desirable at the expiration of the sixty day limit placed by the commission the order will be permanent.

TURNED UP AT AUBURN.

Fort Wayne Carrier Pigeon Was Far Off Its Route.

(Auburn Courier.) Early Saturday forenoon a carrier pigeon flew into the trim shop window at the W. H. McIntyre company factory and was afterward taken possession of by Capt. Collar. Around one of the legs of the pigeon was a metallic band which bore the inscription, "Wm. Swartz, 1825 Green street, Fort Wayne, Ind." Evidently the bird had been let loose at Fort Wayne for a flight. During the heavy storm of Thursday night probably it had taken refuge around the factory. After feeding the bird Capt. Collar let it go and it shot straight up into the air and then took its flight south in the direction of Fort Wayne. Capt. Collar thinks it is one of the twenty-four birds that were let loose a few days ago for a flight from Fort Wayne to Dallas, Tex.

STRENGTH SAFETY CITIZENS TRUST COMPANY BANK PROFITS FOR DEPOSITORS

Sixteen thousand dollars of the earnings made during the first half of 1909 we have credited to the accounts of our depositors. We will have more depositors and more earnings during the last half of this year. Will you be one of the fortunate to save and make your money work for you? We see the advantage in comfort and happiness for our thrifty depositors and encourage every man, woman and child to start a savings account. Despite not the day of small beginnings. We admire the true spirit of saving that comes with one-dollar deposits. Begin now; grow with us. Deposits received during the first week in July share profits from the first day of July.

The Citizens is the oldest trust company in Fort Wayne and never foreclosed a mortgage or lost a dollar. The Citizens has been selected by the bank examiner, acting with the governor and state treasurer, as the only depository for state permanent funds in Allen county. We invite you to know the Citizens as it is known to the bank examiner.

"On Deck" means Ready for Action. That's the attitude toward the public of the German-American Bank. We keep in mind that a bank is not a government monopoly. It is a business seeking customers. It is an ancient idea that a bank is headed about by a divinely akin to that which doth hedge a king. You don't have to have your head and hold your breath when you enter the portals of our institution. We want your business and don't mind telling you so. We have established a savings department where each little fellow feels comfortable. Interest paid at the rate of 4% per annum.

CITY BREVITIES.

Councilman G. W. Boerger and family are enjoying an outing at Rome City.

Patrick Roach, an old resident of this city, has been sent to the county infirmary.

Lightning a few evenings ago killed a yearling colt on the farm of Frank Boley, in St. Joe township.

Rev. W. P. Herron, of this city, was the speaker at the Fourth of July celebration at Pennville today.

John Burkhardt, of Barr street, who recently returned from a trip to his old home in Germany, enjoyed a visit with Count Zeppelin, the aerial navigator, while there. The count was major in the German regiment in which Mr. Burkhardt served many years ago.

Professor French, who has had charge of the manual training work at the Jefferson school, has been chosen by the school board to succeed Professor Ritter, resigned, as professor in charge of the wood working section of the manual training department in the public schools. Mr. Ritter left to assume charge of manual training at Decatur, Ill.

BOWEL COMPLAINT IN CHILDREN.

When six months old the little daughter of E. N. Devery, a well known merchant of Agnewville, Va., had an attack of cholera infantum, Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was given and effected a complete cure. This remedy has proven very successful in cases of bowel complaint in children and when given according to the plain printed directions can be relied upon with perfect confidence. When reduced with water and sweetened it is pleasant to take, which is of great importance when a medicine must be given to young children. For sale by all druggists.

WILL TOUR GERMANY.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Rump to Start on Three months' Trip.

Contractor Fred J. Rump and his family will leave tomorrow for Buffalo and Albany, N. Y., and a few days later Mr. and Mrs. Rump will sail on the North German line for Bremen to begin a three months' tour of Europe.

CHAMBERLAIN'S COLIC, CHOLERA AND DIARRHOEA REMEDY THE BEST AND SUREST.

"It affords me pleasure to state that I consider the preparation known as Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy the best and surest of good results of any I have ever used in my family," says P. E. Herrington, of Mount Aerial, Ky. This is the universal verdict of all who use this remedy. Its cures are so prompt and effectual that people take pleasure in recommending it. For sale by all druggists.

NEIGHBORS FOUGHT FIRE.

The two-story frame residence of Mrs. Spangler, on the Piqua road, was partially destroyed by fire of unknown origin at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Neighbors formed a bucket brigade and saved the place from total destruction.

HELP FOR THOSE WHO HAVE STOMACH TROUBLE.

After doctoring for about twelve years for a bad stomach trouble, and spending nearly five hundred dollars for medicine and doctors' fees, I purchased my wife one box of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, which did her so much good that she continued to use them and they have done her more good than all of the medicine I bought before.—SAMUEL BOYER, Folsom, Iowa. This medicine is for sale by all druggists. Samples free.

MADE WELL AND STRONG

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Another Woman Cured.

Christiana, Tenn.—"I suffered from the worst form of female trouble so that at times I thought I could not live, and my nerves were in a dreadful condition. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me, and made me feel like a different woman. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold to suffering women."—Mrs. MARY WOOD, R.E.D.3.
If you belong to that countless army of women who suffer from some form of female ills, don't hesitate to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs. For thirty years this famous remedy has been the standard for all forms of female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, fibroid tumors, ulceration, inflammation, irregularities, backache, and nervous prostration.
If you want special advice write for it to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

FILED REMONSTRANCE.

Residents Kick Against the Saloon Run by Nahrwald.

Thirteen residents of the Tenth ward have filed with the county auditor, a remonstrance against granting to August Simpkins a license to conduct a saloon at Creighton avenue in the room formerly occupied by Dick Nahrwald. The former proprietor was accidentally shot there and since that time the man who shot him has been running the place for the widow. Simpkins is objected to on the ground that he has no means and is seeking the license for somebody else.

The applications for liquor licenses will be taken up tomorrow instead of today as the commissioners took a holiday for the Fourth of July.

PROPER TREATMENT FOR DYS-ENTERY AND DIARRHOEA.

The great mortality from dysentery and diarrhoea is due to a lack of proper treatment at the first stages of the disease. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is a reliable and effectual medicine, and when given in reasonable time will prevent any dangerous consequences. It has been in use for many years and has always met with unvarying success. For sale by all druggists.

BURGLAR IN RESIDENCE.

CATARRH CANNOT BE CURED

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quick medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country, for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials free.
